Indignant Over 'Insults' From The Japanese

British Call In Ambassador For Consultation

LONDON, June 23—(AP)—Great Britain gave Japan a blunt warning today that she would be forced to take action if the Japanese continued what Prime Minister Chamberlain described as "intolerable insults" to British residents of blockaded Tientsin.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax summoned the Japanese ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu, to the foreign office for a consultation on the situation, and was said to have told the envoy "in the strongest possible terms" that indignities as reported by British authorities in China must cease.

Earlier Chamberlain, speaking in the house of commons, had described the treatment of Britons at Tientsin as "intolerable."

LONDON, June 23—(AP)—Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu was called to the British foreign office today for consultation on what Prime Minister Chamberlain termed "Intolerable insults" to British by Japanese at Tientsin.

The prime minister told the house of commons that Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax had asked the Japanese ambassador to see him and that Halifax would "make it very clear" what he thought of the new incidents, reported last night.

Asked if the British government would put retailiatory measures into operation at once, Chamberlain said:

"I do not think we have got to that stage yet."

Chamberlain made his statement on the far eastern situation in response to numerous questions similar to the barrage directed at him yesterday urging "strong action" against Japan.

"The honorable members will no doubt have seen reports of further indignities to which the British nationals have been subjected," Chamberlain said.

"My noble friend (Lord Halifax) has requested the Japanese ambassador to see him in connection with these incidents today."

Cheers greeted his statement.

(Tientsin reports overnight had told how the British consulate general in Tientsin issued a statement saying eight British subjects had been forced to submit to indignities, including stripping and lengthy examination in full view of Chinese coolies).

Chamberlain concluded his statement with the assertion that "I have no doubt the foreign secretary will make it very clear to the Japanese ambassador when he sees him what we think of those intolerable insults."

Two Are Accused Of Conspiracy

Leland Roberts and Charles "Pinkie" Williams were taken in custody late Thursday afternoon by county and city officers and held for investigation in connection with reports circulated Tuesday that the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Green Ridge was to be robbed.

This morning the two were charged with "unlawfully and wilfully conspiring to commit a felony upon the officers and employes of the Bank of Green Ridge by conspiring to hold up said bank with the use and aid of a pistol."

Roberts and Williams were arraigned in the justice court of J. C. Connor this afternoon, and their preliminary hearing set for Monday. Their bond was placed at $2500, in default of which they are held in the county jail.

Study Be Made For Overhaul In The Revenue

Tax Revision Bill Nearly Ready For The White House

WASHINGTON, June 23. — With the business tax revision bill nearly ready for the president's signature, congressional leaders called today for a post-adjournment study looking toward a top-to bottom overhaul of the revenue structure next year.

The tax bill, carrying levies designed to put $1,600,000,000 in the federal till for 1940, swept to senate passage late yesterday without audible dissent.

Devised as the congressional answer to business complaints against "tax deterrents," the measure then had to go back to the house for acceptance of minor senate amendments.

Besides revamping the corporation tax structure, the bill continues for two years $544,000,000 of "nuisance" taxes.

For corporations, the measure replaces the present undistributed profits tax with a flat 18 per cent income levy on companies earning more than $25,000 a year, and makes other changes asked by business.

Senator Barkley (D-Ky), the majority leader, told reporters "there are still a lot of rough edges" in the tax structure. He said it was probable that a joint senate-house committee would be set up to study the revenue system.

"Although it might be difficult to enact a comprehensive new tax bill in an election year," he added "we would at least have laid the groundwork for revision."

Barkley said the committee might study broadening the income tax base and removing present exemptions from federal and state securities.

The perennial proposal of Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis) to lower personal income tax exemptions was shouted down yesterday after the senate had rejected on a 38 to 38 tie his amendment

New Attack On Police Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23—(AP)—A new attempt to block the Kansas City police bill broke out in the house today when the state control measure came before the speaker for formal signing.

Rep. V. E. Phillips (D), Kansas City, a leading opponent of the measure, objected to signing the bill on a point of order. He contended the measure did not come within the technical requirements of legislation for a revision session of the assembly, such as this.

Stark forces defeated the point of order with an overwhelming 88 to 18 vote, but Phillips had further objections yet to be argued. When the chamber recessed at noon until 2 p. m. He was debating his second technical dispute with the measure.

In addition to the point of order, he had an objection based on the penciled correction in the bill which caused a three-day dispute in the senate. He contended since the senate adopted the penciled correction the bill was not in the same form in which it left the house.

Behind that protest was a written objection, signed by five members, based on the same contention. Phillips, E. J. Keating, and Randall Smart, all of Kansas City, and W. O. Hanks of Joplin and M. T. Devine of Boonville, signed the objection.

The written protest becomes a part of the bill's official record.

The debate continued late into the afternoon session. One effort was to bring a complete halt to the house's drive for a noon adjournment tomorrow. The Phillips' objections took up practically all of today's session and the calendar failed to advance a single item.

Key Positions To Jesse Jones And Carmody

Named To Federal Loan And Federal Works Agencies

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—President Roosevelt chose Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and John M. Carmody, chief of the rural electrification authority today to fill the two positions in his proposed $3,860,000,000 lending program.

He named Jones to administer the federal loan agency which will come into being July 1 and Carmody to run the federal works agency to be created at the same time. For the time being, he left vacant the position of administrator of the new federal security agency, third of the trio of $12,000 a-year jobs he established by regrouping bureaus under the terms of the government reorganization bill.

The appointments of both Jones and Carmody must be confirmed by the senate to which Mr. Roosevelt submitted their nominations 24 hours after announcing yesterday his new program designed to stimulate industrial activity and increase employment through government financed self-liquidating public works over the next two to seven years.

To aid in carrying out this vast enterprise, which needs some enabling legislation before it can be started, Jones and Carmody will take to their new assignments wide experience in both private business and public office.

Headed the RFC

Jones had headed the multi-billion dollar RFC since 1933 and thus has supervised more federal lending designed to help business and industry than any other man in he administration. Now 65, he is a native of Tennessee but spent most of his life in Texas as a financier, builder and publisher.

Carmody became chief of the rural electrification administration in February, 1937, and since has administered the allocation of $229,000,000 of federal funds for approximately 230,000 miles of rural power lines in 44 states and Puerto Rico. Previously he had worked in the steel and garment industries and as a trade magazine editor.

Like Jones he came into the administration in 1933. After the chairmanship of the bituminous coal labor board, he then served successively as chief engineer of the civil works administration and of the federal emergency relief administration, as a member of the national (railway) mediation board and as a member of the national labor relations board.

His appointment as head of the works agency aroused considerable speculation in the capital over whether Secretary Ickes, administrator of the public works administration, had been placed in an anomalous position.

As secretary of the interior he holds a cabinet post. But if he continues as PWA chief after that agency is put under the new works agency he would be in part responsible to Carmody.

Jones indicated that Emil Schram, an RFC director, may be appointed to succeed him as chairman of that agency.

The Jones and Carmody appointments were announced shortly after Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he hoped government securities to be issued to finance the new lending program would not be exempted from taxation.

Trooper Priess Is Third In Shoot

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 23.—Missouri state troopers and St. Louis city police carried away markmanship honors today in the annual state police pistol contests.

The St. Louis squad was first in the team event and Officer Paul Spavor of St. Louis won individual honors with a score of 290 of a possible 300 points.

Other winners in the individual contest included Sgt. D. F. Hagan of the Missouri state police, second, and Trooper H. E. Priess of the Missouri patrol, third.

Trooper Priess was for a time located at Sedalia.

Highest Spending In Peacetime

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Federal spending for the fiscal year totaled $9,005,993,590 on June 21—the highest figure in peacetime history. The year ends June 30.

The still-incomplete sum for this fiscal year compared with a previous peacetime record of $8,879,798,000—in the year ended June 30, 1936, when the soldiers' bonus was paid.

Treasury officials said, however, they did not expect expenditures in the remaining nine days to reach the $9,592,329,000 estimated by President Roosevelt in January, and accordingly the June 30 deficit to be approximately $500,000,000 less than the $4,072,259,000 forcast.

Revenues already had surpassed expectations, and the June 21 total, which was made public today, of $5,585,153,330 was already $65,000,000 over the estimate.

Sen. Nye For Townsend Plan

Predicts National Old-Age Aid Will Be Adopted

INDIANAPOLIS, June 23—(AP)—Senator Gerald P. Nye (R-ND) told the fourth national convention of Townsend old-age pension clubs today that their plan was "right" and "honest" and predicted, "We are going to have a national old-age retirement plan in this country."

"Those who hesitate to assist in its fulfillment," he asserted, "are only postponing the ultimate to their own disadvantage. The job at hand is not to debate whether such a system should be established, but to find that kind of system which will work."

He complimented the 10,000 graying men and women delegates — who lost no opportunity to sing of their faith in the Townsend plan or to break into wild cheering for its founder, 72-year-old Dr. Francis E. Townsend — for their "persistency upon a principle that is as right and as honest as any principle ever laid down."

"This plan," he said, "calls for the levying of a tax upon business transactions, the returns of which would be available for distribution among the aged who could qualify for this deserving consideration."

Nye described relief as a "narcotic, not a cure-all," and said, "The United States will build back its great strength only as it will cause honest reward for honest labor and provide adequately for those who have earned the right to live without begging and borrowing and pleading pauperism on bended and prayerful knees."

Among others scheduled to address the delegates who crowded into Cadle Tabernacle, scene of many religious meetings, today were Rep. Martin F. Smith (D-

Pendergast May Be Yard Man

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., June 23.—(AP)—T. J. (Boss) Pendergast may become a yard man at the federal penitentiary.

Pendergast and his friend and party henchman, R. Emmet O'Malley, will be released from the quarantine cell block at the prison June 28. They entered prison 25 days ago after pleading guilty to federal indictments of income tax evasion.

Authoritative sources reported there was little possibility either of the two would be transferred to the federal prison hospital at Springfield, Mo. It was said neither required medical attention that could not be given here.

Out of quarantine, Pendergast and O'Malley will be assigned regular prison duties. Reliable sources indicated Pendergast probably will be assigned to the yard gang, whose duties are to keep the yard clean.

O'Malley may join his friend on the yard gang, or it was indicated he may be assigned a clerical task.

Blockade Irks The Americans

Representations To Japanese On Tientsin Affair

TIENTSIN, June 23—(AP)— Cecil Davis, honorary agent in Tientsin for the New Zealand government, asserted tonight he had been slapped and forced to undress by Japanese gendarmes, who are continuing their searching practice begun ten days ago after blockade of the British and French concessions.

United States Consul Frederick W. Hinke earlier had made representations, which consulate attaches emphasized was not a formal protest, against inconveniences suffered by Americans at the concession barricades.

Davis, a British subject, yesterday was not molested when two companions were forced to strip for the Japanese gendarmes.

He said that today, however, he had to stand naked 15 minutes while a dozen foreign women passed the barrier and walked through the shed where he was detained.

Davis said he objected to the order to undress on the ground that he was an official whereupon a gendarme slapped him across the mouth with his passport.

Davis replied "thanks," and the gendarme slapped him again, and then a third time. The Japanese then summoned three colleagues and they forced the briton to strip.

At the British consulate general it was said no reply had been received to a series of protests made to the Japanese since the blockade started.

The reciprocal declaration, signed at the foreign office, followed by a few hours a ceremony at Ankara, the Turkish capital, in which France ceded the republic of Hatay to Turkey in return for the latter's assistance in the British-French bloc of nations.

Agreement To Barter Cotton To Get Rubber

United States And British Sign Pact In London

LONDON, June 23—(AP)—An agreement for the exchange on a barter basis of British rubber for United States cotton for use in wartime was signed here today.

Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy signed for the United States and Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, for the British government. The agreement was to be published at midnight (6 p. m. EST).

Previously Stanley had informed the house of commons of the barter pact.

Negotiations for the large-scale transaction involving the "exchange of certain raw materials required as strategic reserves in both countries" were opened more than a month ago. The details, Stanley said, would be announced later.

Assurances were given at a special committee meeting of the Liverpool cotton association that the cotton stocks in question would not come on the market for at least five years and then through ordinary channels.

It was also said yesterday that the cotton trade would not oppose a bill to legalize the barter deal and the cotton association agreed to name experts to sample cotton in the United States and arrange for its acceptance in Great Britain.

Jump on Futures

Futures jumped 17 to 18 points at the close of yesterday's dealings on the Liverpool cotton market.

The Canadian government had protested against the agreement.

Because of this, wheat was said to have been dropped from the deal. Stanley's statement to the house did not mention wheat and officials of the board of trade, a government department, said the present agreement did not include that commodity.

It was reliably understood the agreement would involve 600,000

Sedalians Hurt As Car Upsets

Sam Bowser, his daughter, Mrs. John A. Collins and her daughter, Miss Betty Collins, Fourth street and Washington avenue, received injuries about 11:30 o'clock this morning when the Ford car in which they were riding overturned.

The accident occurred a few miles west of Warrensburg, while they were enroute to Kansas City.

According to word received here, Mr. Bowser was driving the car and a tire blew out causing it to overturn. It was reported Mr. Bowser received an ear injury, while Mrs. Collins was pinned under the car, but her condition is not believed to be serious. Betty received bruises.

Mr. Bowser, his daughter and granddaughter were brought to Sedalia, and Mr. Bowser and Mrs. Collins were taken to the Bothwell hospital. They are not able to receive visitors.

The automobile was demolished.

Every Consideration On Lending Plan

Doubts Assembly End Saturday

JEFFERSON CITY, June 22—(AP)—The 60th general assembly's "Saturday, June 24," may carry through the week-end and well into next week.

The assembly has agreed to adjourn sine die at noon tomorrow. But Rep. John D. Taylor (D) Keytesville, told the house today:

"We have no time for trivial motions today. If we finish tomorrow it's going to be one of the longest Saturdays ever known to this assembly. We may stop the clocks at noon but it's my opinion we'll be here Monday."

Impressed By The Visit To The New World

Luncheon Given In Welcome Home To Royal Pair

LONDON, June 23—(AP)—King George VI declared today the deepest impression of his historic 15,000-mile trip with Queen Elizabeth to the new world was that "the strength of human feeling still is the most potent of all forces affecting world affairs."

"As a North American historian has written, 'over all nations is humanity'," the monarch said in responding to a toast at a state luncheon given by the lord mayor of London in the ancient guildhall.

The royal couple returned from their North American trip yesterday and the luncheon today constituted their official welcome home.

King George said he was impressed by the keen public interest in the New York World's Fair display of the Magna Charta, the document signed in 1215 by King John which laid the foundation for security of English political and personal liberty.

He noted also his personal acceptance of the credentials of Daniel C. Roper as United States minister to Ottawa and his signature of the Canada-United States trade treaty.

U. S. Ambassador Attends

"The detailed story of our travels is familiar to you through the daily press, newsreels and broadcasting corporations which on both sides of the Atlantic have reported it with accuracy and sympethetic understanding," the king added.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy sat at the royal table with Queen Mother Mary, Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Ambassador Kennedy, as has been his custom, wore evening dress instead of the knee breeches of levee dress in which other dignitaries appeared.

The king said he hoped the royal tour of North America might "be of some importance in its influence on the empire's future destiny."

He declared it was his desire to serve the ideals of the British commonwealth which led him to undertake the journey — "to foster its sane, wholesome faith; to show if I could that its headship, which I have been called upon to assume, exists today as a potent force for the promotion of peace and goodwill among mankind."

Of the trip itself, the king said: "We have been welcomed with a sincerity that stirred us profoundly by millions of our fellow human beings in Canada, the United States and in Newfoundland. That welcome has been re-echoed in the land which to us, as to so many of our kindred overseas, will always be home."

Heavy Battle In Air Reported

TOKYO, June 23—(AP)—A heavy air battle between Japanese and Mongolian forces was reported today to have taken place Thursday in the Lake Bor area on the frontier between Manchoukuo and Soviet Russian-dominated Outer Mongolia.

Domei (Japanese news agency) reported from Hsinking, Manchoukuo, a communique of the Japanese Kwanting army telling of the clash.

The communique said Japanese downed 49 Mongolian planes and lost five in the battle above Kansurmaiao, north of Lake Bor. It said 18 Japanese planes had engaged 150 Mongol craft and added: "Outer Mongolian and Soviet flying units have been invading Manchoukuo repeatedly since June 19."

Mixed Reaction On Program Of The President

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—President Roosevelt expressed the hope today that government securities issued to finance his proposed new $3,860,000,000 lending program would not be tax exempt.

As administration leaders at the capitol studied the vast lending proposal to determine what new legislation may be necessary, the President answered many new questions about it at a press conference.

Asked whether the securities which would be issued by various federal agencies to raise funds to lend on a wide variety of self liquidating projects would be exempt from taxes, the President said he did not know the law on that point but hoped they would not.

He added he hoped congress would make it clear that no more public securities would be exempt from taxation.

Replying to a question as to the interest rate to be charged local governments for the loans, the President said this should be as low as possible and he expected both the principal and interest to be paid.

Much of the lending would be done by the new federal works agency which under the recently approved government reorganization plans goes into operation July 1.

The President said he expected to send to the senate today the nomination to head that agency and one of the other two new agencies under the reorganization.

Asked when he would appoint the six White House assistants as provided under the revamping orders, the President said he did not know whether any money was available to pay them.

The chief executive also expressed doubt whether funds were available to pay the heads of the consolidated agencies.

At the capitol, meanwhile, Representative Taber of New York, ranking Republican on the house appropriations committee, declared the President's program "is nothing but a subterfuge to break down the budget act and to evade the statutory limitation on the public debt."

The program would be financed by government-guaranteed securities of the various government agencies involved in the plan rather than directly out of the treasury.

Economy Plan For The CCC

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—The Civilian Conservation Corps announced today that all reserve officers on duty in CCC camps may apply for reappointment as civilians under the new economy program when their terms expire.

Authorities said that between now and Dec. 31, when the CCC expects to be commanded entirely by civilians, some 5,000 reserve officers now serving as company commanders, physicians, chaplains and staff officers will be given preference.

Those who do not apply for reappointment will be replaced by men selected from reserve army officers on the active list. They, too, must apply as civilians.

Robert Fechner, CCC director, said the new regulations were expected to save about $1,000,000 annually. Reappointed camp captains hereafter will be paid about $216 a month. Previously they received about $350, depending on seniority in the army, subsistence pay and allowances for living quarters and uniforms.

Fechner announced the CCC would enroll 64,267 men in July to fill vacancies.

Sharper, Perhaps, Than Swords

Hitler's long-predicted troubles in occupied Czechoslovakia seem to have begun.

Despite a few violent outbreaks in which policemen have been killed, most of this developing Czech resistance seems to be of the passive kind.

And that is very interesting, because it is barely possible that this is the most effective kind of resistance. The Czechs were persuaded, by British-French arguments and by circumstances, not to fight for their country's independence. Whether that was a wise decision or not is hard to decide finally at this time. But the fact that military resistance was not made does not mean, apparently that the Czechs will not resist at all the Germanization for which Hitler believes them destined.

Here are some of the little things that are happening in Czechoslovakia, gathered from many dispatches from that area:

In cafes and shops, clerks and waiters stand blankly when German soldiers or Brownshirts order anything. They pretend not to understand.

Many German patrons of such places have been victims of a sudden clumsiness of waiters who spilled hot soup over their uniforms.

If the soup is not spilled, it may come to the table so loaded with pepper that the Nazis choke, or perhaps a bent pin is found at the bottom of the bowl—all a regrettable accident, of course, but irritating none the less.

A Czech mayor, receiving a bill from the German authorities for food furnished the poor in the early days of the occupation, sent back a prompt bill for iron railings removed from barrack walls.

In Pilsen, acid was thrown on a detachment of passing German troops, injuring no one, but staining the uniforms and causing embarrassment to the Germans. More than 100 were arrested.

On Eduard Benes' birthday, buttonhole rosettes flowered throughout the Czech territory, mute evidence that the republic is not forgotten. Statues of Czech heroes have been prominently decked with flowers.

All these things can be very irritating indeed to an army of occupation. The evident intention is to goad the Germans into frankly taking over Czechoslovakia as part of the Reich. This, or harsh measures of suppression, would further alienate foreign opinion. Many Czechs probably figure that, having lost their independence anyway, they might as well go all the way, since Czechoslovakia as an integral part of Germany will be a greater handicap than Czechoslovakia as a "protectorate."

This sort of silent, stubborn, non-violent but exceedingly irritating attitude may in the long run prove a more effective defense of the Czech republic than its army could have been.

Protecting Pedestrians

Motorists generally have accepted traffic regulation as inevitable. But pedestrians have not. The same man who when driving his car will stop for a red light, will when walking dodge across the street relying on his own nimbleness rather than on the regulations.

It is just a quirk of human nature. Man plus car accepts regulation; man alone insists on being free.

But that is passing. The next stop in cutting down the traffic toll must be the regulation of the pedestrian, says a special committee of the National Safety Council which studied the question. Last year three of every five persons killed in traffic accidents were pedestrians. And two-thirds of the 12,500 pedestrians killed last year were violating a traffic ordinance or committing an obviously unsafe act at the time.

That makes the course clear. The time is coming when pedestrians must obey traffic ordinances as consistently as drivers.

China Wins A Trick

The Japanese plan to seize the silver casket containing the remains of Genghis Khan, Mongol conqueror, and take it into the conquered area of China has been foiled. The Chinese themselves have taken it to an undisclosed hiding place in westernmost China.

Thus the venerated dust that is still to millions of Chinese a symbol of past Chinese glory and power, has been saved. It may prove to have been a valuable trick in the game.

A Chinese business man, in Cleveland for the convention of International Rotary, is quoted as saying that "China will win in only a few more years." In Japan, the population is being prepared for two more years of war, already nearly two years old.

With both sides grimly preparing for a finish fight that looks years ahead, the symbol of the 700-year-old bones of the Mongol conqueror may in the end prove to have been a mighty factor. So potent are the intangible and immaterial factors in that most material of all proceedings, war.

• The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Behind the scenes, the State Department has been putting fire-crackers under Jesse Jones to get his Export-Import Bank to finance a 300,000 bale sale of cotton to Fascist Spain.

Jesse, however, is skeptical about the deal, doesn't want to give General Franco more than one year's credit, whereas Cordell Hull's young men think that Franco should have at least two years. Jesse fears, probably with justice, that Spain will be involved in another European scrap before two years are up, and the USA never will collect its coin.

Significant of State Department policy is the fact that when Spain was under a republican government, Mr. Hull's career boys kept talking about the fact that Spain had not paid her debts. And when the Loyalists wanted to purchase automobiles and non-military equipment in the United States, they had to pay cash.

Now that Spain is under a fascist dictatorship, however, the State Department, despite Roosevelt's denunciation of dictatorships, is urging heavy credits for Franco.

Question in a lot of people's minds is: Who is running U. S. foreign policy—the Career Boys or Roosevelt?

WPA Political Trade

Inside reason for that bi-partisan three-man WPA board which the Appropriations subcommittee sprang on Congress was a secret log-rolling deal between Virginia's anti-New Deal Democrat Woodrum and New York's anti-New Deal Republican Taber, both leaders of the committee.

The two men have been working hand-in-glove in battling the White House on relief appropriations. So in return for Taber's potent support, the bi-partisan board was inserted in the bill during the sub-committee's closed-door deliberations, even though it is manifestly inconsistent with the Woodrum-Taber demand for greater economy and efficiency.

For the board will add at least $100,000 to WPA operating costs in salaries, furnishings, traveling expenses, etc. And those items mean patronage boodle.

However, the Republicans would be assured a foothold in WPA, something they have coveted a long time. And as GOP leader of the committee, Taber probably would have a lot to say about picking the Republican board member.

Privately, some House GOP leaders didn't like the scheme, but couldn't oppose it without repudiating Taber. So they swallowed their disapproval.

"Democratic" Debate

Also, both Republican and Democratic leaders privately were far from happy about the riotous spectacle staged by the House in the closing hours of the 14-hour session which jammed through the relief bill. The House is not noted for decorum, but this particular debate was the worst brawl seen there in years.

Members sprawled in their seats howling, hooting, cat-calling. Others dashed about like sailors on a jamboree. The Floor looked like a monkey house and sounded like a dock riot.

With Taber cracking the whip, Woodrum kept the coalition's ranks firmly in line throughout the long ordeal, but took considerable punishment from Democratic colleagles. Representative Clarence Cannon, veteran Missouri member of the subcommittee, roasted him in one of the most sizzling attacks the House has heard in a long time.

Woodrum kept his temper, but he blew up later when Representative Jack Nichols of Oklahoma jumped him just after the Republicans had given Woodrum a big ovation.

"It is fitting for the Republicans to acclaim the Gentleman from Virginia," snapped Nichols "He, a Democrat, has done what they could not do in hamstringing a Democratic President."

Stung to the quick, Woodrum leaped to his feet and declared that he was not the only Democratic leader supporting the bill. At this Representative Pat Boland of Pennsylvania Democratic Whip, shouted angrily, "I am one of the Democratic leaders of the House and I most emphatically do not agree with the Gentleman's viewpoint." Woodrum said nothing.

Czech Revival Plans

Confidential plans have been made by the beleaguered citizens of Czechoslovakia to carry on the same campaign in the United States that led to the formation of the new state at the close of the World War.

To that end, Eduard Benes, exiled President, will come to Washington June 28, visit key persons here, and then sail for Europe on July 12.

Replacing him as a sort of wandering ambassador in the United States will come Jan Masaryk, son of the late Czech President and more recently Czech minister to London. Young Masaryk is a better mixer than Benes, speaks better English, and will devote himself to rally Czech sentiment in America.

Submarine Sabotage?

There is no possible way that the question can be settled, but U. S. naval officers, in common with other experts, suspect sabotage in the sinking of three submarines in rapid succession in the fleets of the United States, France and Great Britain—all democratic countries.

Naval officials have kept it a deep secret, but they have uncovered instances of sabotage on American warships in the past They also admit that sabotage is relatively easy.

For instance, one case of sabotage burnt out the fire control room on the USS Colorado several years ago. Later it was discovered that someone had hammered phonograph needles through the cable connecting the fire control room (from which an officer directs the fire of the big guns) with the gun turrents.

These cables contain a score of small wires, and the needles cut the insulation between the wires, causing a short circuit.

After the control room of the Colorado was rebuilt, the Navy found phonograph needles stuck into the cables once again.

On a submarine, the disconnecting of communications wires or valves could easily mean disaster. If the three submarines were sunk by sabotage, naval officers believe the strategy was to instill fear into democratic navies just before the Japanese-German squeeze play on Britain and Poland.

• Raising a Family

By Olive Roberts Barton

What has happened to the day nursery? Ten years ago that humanitarian movement to care for the small child of the working mother, was on everybody's tongue. Recently, what with other social agencies in the ascendant, the word has retreated in our minds. So let us see what is being done to create a new usefulness for it.

The day nursery was first founded almost a century ago, with the simple idea of providing shelter, food and care while the parent was away at work. In short, for years it has been a haven for the children of the poor.

According to Mrs. Ernest Frederick Eidlitz president of the year-old National Association of Day Nurseries, the time has come to bring the day nursery up to date, and to make it a social agency that will cooperate with other organizations for the betterment of the child.

Mrs. Eidlitz maintains, and we must agree with her most heartily, that the "day nursery can no longer be a thing apart—it is just one tool in the welfare picture to help maintain the family in periods of stress which may or may not be concerned with economic problems. Family illness, family discord or educational needs of a particular child make demands on the day nursery from families of varied background. A flexible admission policy is very important."

The last words explain themselves. The day nursery will eventually become not only a house of refuge but a clearing house for many children with unfortunate backgrounds and surroundings, or for special children with special needs. Such cases may be referred, then, to other specific agencies when the need is apparent.

Organizations Ready To Help

The National Association of Day Nurseries, at 122 East Twenty-second Street, New York, is ready to give useful advice to day nurseries both in and outside its ranks. Admission to the Association depends upon the status and the ambitions, of a given nursery. The idea, however, is to help, not to shut out any worthy applicant.

At last, the aims of the day nurseries in general will be to deal with small children and their families for their mutual betterment. That is an ideal in keeping with the times.

BRIDE ON A BUDGET

BY JANET DORAN
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Iris cooks a meal all right but she plays an act, feigning frayed nerves, utter exhaustion. Bart is unable to understand the whims of women. Iris is really playing the martyr.

CHAPTER V

THAT following morning, Bart got up an hour earlier, and had breakfast all on the table before he called Iris. But she greeted his gentle peace offering with weary petulance.

"Don't worry, Bart, I won't be late to work. And if I am, I can still do your housework, cook your meals, and pay my own way as well."

"Iris, this is an unreasonable, childish attitude," he pleaded humbly. "Can't you see, dear, it's for your own good that I want to make something of our present?"

"Skip the explanations, Bart. They all add up to the same total. Men marry for better, not worse. They marry to get ahead, and they lose little time in fitting the yoke to the one they marry."

"You're tired, Iris; unreasonable. This isn't like you."

"It's a litle late to discover the effects of overwork, Bart!"

In the days that followed, Bart was sure he lived in a strange nightmare from which he must surely awaken sometime. He got up early each morning, and while the soft June morning awoke and the birds sang noisy choruses outside the open windows, prepared their simple breakfast.

He followed the little budget book faithfully, despite the sarcastic comments of Iris. He believed in the wisdom of the little oracle, and he had a stubborn, unshakable faith in figures once proved.

It was Iris who scornfully surveyed the top-milk in the little blue pitcher before measuring out the cream for her coffee.

"Top-milk from one quart of milk," she mimicked sarcastically, "ample for two persons, breakfast, cream in coffee, and cereal. Use milk to prepare dessert for dinner."

"It saves 20 cents a day on cream alone, Iris." That was Bart, defensive, a trifle annoyed. 'That's $1.40 a week—almost $73 a year. And in 20 years it would mean a good substantial block of paid-up life insurance."

"I never heard of taking food off the table to make insurance premiums, Bart."

"There's your cream, Iris; I haven't taken anything away from our table." And he did not add that he was $18 ahead, for that first week alone. That buying the food for the house, paying cash for it and taking advantage of low-priced bargains was the right idea. If he could win Iris over.

"Left-overs, hash, cabbage. Cheap food for cheap people. I'd rather work overtime, Bart, and live like civilized people."

"If living far beyond our means means being civilized, Iris, then I'm afraid I misunderstood you when you said we'd manage to get along by pooling our salaries and living on a budget!"

"You were thinking of saving money even then, Bart, weren't you? You married to save the expense of living in a restaurant! You married to better yourself, not because you loved me."

"It seems to me if you loved me, Iris, you'd want to help me get ahead."

"Well, I am! What more can you expect?"

"You might take it with a little sporting fairness, instead of acting like a persecuted martyr. Other women cook and keep house and seem to like it."

"Other women do not work eight hours a day in an office, Bart Whittaker."

There were arguments aplenty, those weeks during which Bart tried to work out some sort of stable adjustment to their financial affairs. Always beginning with petty trifles, they ended up invariably with mountainous issues, with old, forgotten hurts and disappointments dragged in, and an ever-widening gulf between them as the summer settled in for a long, hot run and their nerves wore thin with disappointment and defeat.

Bart wanted Iris to take out some insurance. An endowment life insurance policy was a good way for women to protect themselves, and it was a thrifty plan to get ahead.

"Good heavens, what do you do with your money, Iris? You're making $25 a week, and you haven't a thing to buy."

Her long, violet eyes flicked him curiously and he felt a faint twinge of uneasiness.

"Is it so astonishing that I lived my life, earned money and needed it before I married you, Bart?" He flushed in quick irritation, but did not back down.

"All right then, Iris, what happens to the money you used to spend on food and rent?"

"When you bring home your books from the shop, Bart, and explain the spending of every dime you earn, I'll do the same for you."

THAT was the week Bart bought the soap-shaker in the 10-cent store. He had, he told Iris, noticed they used quite a lot of soap flakes in the kitchen, and back home his mother had always saved the thin wafers of soap left over and used them in the soap-shaker. It saved quite a bit.

"Use toilet soap to wash dishes, Bart?" Iris challenged incredulously.

"Why not, Iris? If it's fit to wash your hands with, what's wrong with doing dishes with the left-over slivers?"

There was a similar argument over the tin cannister set Bart brought home from the shop. In them, he insisted, they could keep left-over toast for puddings, for crumbs and stuffing. They could keep cracker crumbs in one, broken cookie bits in another.

"We have no puddings, Bart; you know I do not like made dishes. And stuffing is for turkey or chicken, and it's too monotonous for only two to try to eat a while chicken or turkey. Broilers are better."

"In the budget book it tells how to make swell desserts out of left-over cake, cookies or bread, Iris. My mother used to, and they were slick."

Iris forbore comment on the culinary accomplishments of the senior Mrs. Whittaker. There was trouble enough without quarreling over the ways of a woman dead over 15 years.

"Eighty-nine cents is a lot to spend on four tin cans we'll probably never use, Bart. Seems to me your budget book is crazy."

At the end of the week there were two pieces of toast, and two dried rolls in the biggest cannister. And Bart proposed to make a chocolate bread pudding out of them.

"It takes only two pieces of bread, Iris."

"Ugh, chocolate bread pudding. Horrid old fattening stuff. Tastes like boiled Eskimo boot. Besides, I bought raspberries, Bart."

"We'll have the berries for breakfast, Iris. And I like chocolate bread pudding."

They had the pudding, and Iris refused to eat her dish of raspberries for breakfast.

"I'll have mine at dinner, Bart. I bought them for that."

Baffled, he watched her store them in the refrigerator. Unreasoningly annoyed, he decided Iris was just contrary. She just wouldn't listen to reason or logic. It was funny in a way. Hearing all those jokes all these years about the little woman. Now, finding they weren't funny at all. They were all too bitterly true. Too real.

Sedalian At Boys' State Learns Politics First Hand

Bob McCullough of Sedalia, reports that the "learn by doing" method is the best yet when it comes to studying state government functions.

Bob, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCullough, 501-Dal-Whi-Mo, is atending the Missouri Boys' State, being held this week on the campus of the Missouri School for the Deaf at Fulton.

Boy's State is an annual seven-day encampment sponsored by the American Legion to educate Missouri boys in the duties, privileges, rights and responsibilities of American citizenship.

Practices Law

Bob, who is a "practicing lawyer" at Boys' State, was campaign manager for Ed Rottman of St. Louis, who was elected state treasurer.

This year, the second for Boys' State in Missouri, there are 327 boys from over Missouri, between the ages of 15 and 18, who gathered at Fulton and elected their own state officers from the governorship on down. They run their own government, just like they do in Jefferson City, to familiarize themselves with actual problems of self government.

There are two political parties at Boys' State: "Nationalists" and "Federalists." Bob is an ardent supporter of the "Nationalist" party.

Tried For Circuit Judge

He ran for the office of circuit judge in Price county, one of the mythical divisions of Boys' State, but was defeated by about 10 votes. He never gave up, however, and was nominated for the office of state auditor on the Federalist ticket until they found out he was a Nationalist and withdrew his name. Bob said he thought they knew it all the time.

"This is the best bunch of boys I've ever met," Bob says, "and I am glad to have the opportunity to be with them and learn about our government."

The boys are assigned to "cities" during the one week encampement. There are 50 boys to a "city" and two "cities" make up a "county". Three "counties" form the mythical 49th state.

Bob, a citizen of Crowder City, is the drummer in a swing band, which played to an open house Thursday night.

He, like all the rest of the boys, is looking forward to the trip to Jefferson City today when they will operate the state government for one day and will meet the officers whom they represent at Boys' State.

Wants More Sedalians

He was sent to Boys' State by the American Legion Post No. 16 of Pettis County. Bob is well pleased with his trip, but thinks there should have been more than one boy sent from Sedalia. Any civic organization was eligible to sponsor a boy of good character and right qualifications.

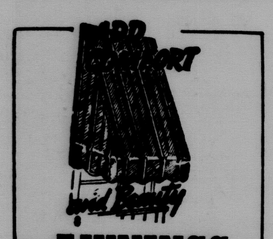

One of the most important 'cases" of the week, was the trial of Colonel B. Marvin Casteel, head of the State Highway Patrol, yesterday on charges of parking his car on the wrong side of the road.

Colonel Casteel was sentenced to a stiff course of setting-up exercises.

Threat To Close Some Concessions

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—A threat to close several small foreign concessions faced the New York World's Fair today as both the fair corporation and a contracting firm were accused again of presenting exhorbitant bills to foreign exhibitors.

Armando D'Ans, architect of the Argentine pavilion, said an illuminated map made in Argentina for $800, cost $8,807 to have repaired and installed at the fair. The bill, he said, included hire of three trucks and employment of 21 men for 95 hours each.

A representative of the constructing firm said some of the charges were "misunderstood" by the Argentinians and that they had demanded the most expensive materials.

Shipton and Vandersteen Co., Ltd., proprietors of nine English and Dutch exhibits of jewelry, pottery and silverware, announced they would be compelled to close them if the fair persisted in demands for an increased commission on receipts. It complained rental fees already were exorbitant.

A Belgian publication, La Depeche Colonials Belge, accused unions here of using "gangster methods" in an article ironically entitled "Beauties of American Hospitality," and urged that the foreign minister in Belgium protest to the American government.

Last week foreign commissioners said the fair costs for 58 nations were $10,000,000 above expectations, mostly in overtime pay to workers "who did nothing." Labor officials countered that foreign exhibitors sought to undermine American labor standards.

Casteel Up Before Boys' 'Court'

FULTON, Mo., June 23.—(AP)—A bunch of eager boys were all set today to watch Col. B. Marvin Casteel get the "works."

The state highway patrol superintendent, who is director of the American Legion-sponsored boys' state, was sentenced to do some early-morning setting up exercises with the boys as punishment for "illegal parking." He was convicted in the "Price County circuit court" yesterday.

Elvin Prost of Perryville, attorney for the patrol head, argued for an acquittal, but Prosecutor Kenneth Bigus of Kansas City won. Judge Malcolm Bleick of University City passed "sentence."

The boys, who have been sutdying functions of city and county governments, traveled to Jefferson City today for first-hand observations of state government operations.

One Year To Go

Presidential Possibilities

No. 3—Robert Taft

Solid Senator Robert Taft—son of a president.

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Washington Correspondent

If one Roosevelt could succeed another after a lapse of a quarter of a century, a Taft might do the same thing. The Taft who has an excellent chance to do so is Ohio's Senator Robert Taft.

As befits the son of William Howard Taft, Senator Taft has a sound and orthodox Republican background. Now 50, he is a successful lawyer, has served six years in the Ohio House of Representatives (winding up as speaker) and two in the Ohio Senate, and has been active in Cincinnati and Ohio politics for years.

Taft is a solid conservative and makes no bones about it. He campaigned as such last fall in Ohio and was elected, beating New Dealer Robert Bulkley. His record in Washington since then has been consistent.

He is intelligent, lacks the conventional politician's tricks, in ordinary conversation gives the impression of being anxious to decide each question on its merits after careful study. Off the Senate floor he is informal and friendly.

In Washington, Taft has made useful contacts among eastern party leaders, who were anxious to see the man who broke the New Deal string of victories in politically important Ohio.

No appraisal of Candidate Taft is complete without a mention of Mrs. Taft. Gracious and charming, she is also politically astute, and is credited with being the senator's most valuable counsellor and strategist.

HIS ASSETS: Solid, straightforward conservatism; a first-rate political name; thorough knowledge of the political ropes; substantial ability as a vote-getter, proven in last fall's Ohio election; an unblemished personal reputation.

HIS LIABILITIES: An unimpressive oratorical style and platform manner; some unpopularity among his colleagues in the Senate; a slightly disappointing record since his arrival in Washington.

HIS CHANCES: Excellent, if the country's "swing to the right" continues.

Farm Benefits More Extensive

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—Administration farm officials said today that congressional approval of $338,000,000 in additional farm benefits would provide the most extensive agricultural aid program in the nation's history.

Provisions of the agriculture department supply bill agreed to by both houses will give the department about $966,000,000 to finance crop production and surplus disposal systems designed to improve farm prices and increase the agricultural income.

Funds made available for the current year totaled about $875,000,000.

The house agreed yesterday to the benefit increases voted by the senate. Some final differences over the bill, however, remained to be ironed out by a joint committee.

Officials said that in general 1940 farm programs would be close duplications of those in operation this season.

Producers will be given acreage allotments. Those complying with allotments and observing the department's soil conservation practices will get about $725,000,000 in subsidies.

Farmers will receive benefits this year at these rates: Wheat, 28 cents a bushel; cotton 3.6 cents a pound; rice 22 cents a hundred pounds, and corn (in the commercial corn belt) 15 cents a bushel. Next year's rates are expected to be somewhat similar.

Two plans have been projected for disposing of surpluses. One would broaden an export subsidy program under which 112,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat was sold in foreign markets. It probably will be extended to cotton and lard.

The other would increase distribution of surplus food and certain types of cotton goods among relief families.

June Meeting By Extension Club

The Bois D'Arc Extension club held its June business meeting and luncheon at the home of Mrs. H. J. Claussius. Mrs. Sydney Hogan presided.

Members responded to roll call with an inspirational poem. The resignation of Mrs. Harold Withers as president was accepted with regret and Mrs. Howard Burton was elected to finish out her unexpired term.

The following committee was appointed to formulate plans for furnishing the club's meeting house, Mrs. Vernon Sears, Mrs. W. T. Harper, Mrs. E. M. Copland.

The July meeting will be at the club house.

Was Hostess To Extension Club

Mrs. Herbert Brown was hostess to the Vanatta Extension club last Wednesday at an all day meeting. Mrs. George Landis was a special guest.

An especially prepared menu for the noon meal consisted of meat loaf and patties, gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, spiced prunes, celery, grape sherbet, crackers, cake and iced tea.

The roll call for the business meeting was answered by reciting an inspirational poem. Mrs. H. Gorrell was project leader and gave an ironing demonstration, giving the high points on ironing shirts and wash pants.

A community ice cream social was planned for the Fourth of July evening, with each family to donate one half gallon of ice cream to be frozen, and a cake.

The next meeting will be held July 12 at the home of Mrs. Frank Chaney, with Mrs. Roy Alexander as project leader. The July project will be on wild flowers.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Monroe Neale, July 13. Roll call will be "one way to make wash day easier." The program will be about fly control.

Eldorado Springs Edges Out Local Batsmen, 4-2

Merchants Stopped By 'Pitcher' Turk's Hooks; Smith Gets Triple; Crowd Poor

Behind the three hit hurling of "Pitcher" Turk, the Eldorado Springs nine defeated the Sedalia Merchants 4 to 2 Thursday night at Liberty Park, before a small crowd.

The visitors broke up a tie game in the eighth inning, scoring two runs on three hits and an error for their final and winning tallies.

Smith Starts Fireworks

Smith, visiting shortstop, started the fireworks in the fatal eighth with a fence-rattling triple after Turk had flied deep to Overfelt in left field. Smith scored when Pererie singled to short left. Hert, next up, singled to right bringing in Peterie who had gotten to second.

Bosher walked after Breckenage was thrown out on a grounder from short to first. J. Miller whiffed ending the stanza.

Blaine, who started for the Merchants, held the opposition to three hits until the eighth, when they collected three more. He was relieved in that inning by Al Schrick who was scheduled to pitch, but Manager Vincent Siegel changed his mind at the last minute.

Turk is Elusive

Turk had a fast breaking hook that baffled the Sedalians from the start. In the second the Merchants bunched two of their hits for a run.

Overfelt first up, slapped a three-bagger to deep center and scored a moment later when Zey singled. The local boys also scored in the first on a fielders choice, one error and a sacrifice.

The Merchants, who have been unable to draw many customers were in the game all the way, but were unable to make up the big two runs on pinch hitters in the last two innings.

• The Sport Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

SUMMIT, N. J., June 23.—(AP)—They are trying to get the jovial Signor Galento irritable and on edge for the fight by beating him at rummy . . . R. E. Long of Poplar, Mont., sent along a can of spinach with the info that if Tony licks Louis he can have a half interest in the Long garage. . . . Don't let anybody tell you old two-ton isn't in shape . . . For Galento, he's in amazing trim . . . That tremendous stomach is down to almost zero.

Who Said 15 Rounds?

The Niagara Falls Gazette tells you how the local ball club will meet the fight competition:

"As the heavyweight fight between Joe Louis and Tony Galento is scheduled for June 28, arrangements are being made to halt the game for two or three minutes so the spectators may listen to the blow-by-blow account of the affair from the ringside . . . Following the knockout the game will proceed."

Red Rolfe, Yankee third sacker, isn't a red, but he writes a column of sports comment for the daily worker just for the practice . . . This may be telling tales out of school, but Dizzy Dean never had a pair of shoes on until he joined the army in 1927 . . . Elza Thompson was fired as a Joe Louis stooge because he bopped the cham too hard in sparring sessions . . . The reason the Braddock-Farr London fight fell through is that the British board of boxing control finally got hep that Joe Gould is the manager of both fighters.

Today's Guest Star

Kenneth Jones, Peoria, (Ill) Journal-Transcript: "The inspired Phillies, it would seem, have expired."

The California-Southern California football feud is hotter than ever and if the Trojans don't make the Rose Bowl next January it probably will be California's fault . . . Here's the Broadway betting situation: Galento backers can get nine slugs from the gamblers for their one. But if you like Louis, you have to lay down 11 to get one . . . In Jersey, Louis is 1-6, with plenty of potatoes to be had around Newark and the various oranges.

Scooparade

Two other—and richer—American League clubs will be glad to sign Jimmy Dykes to a long-term contract whenever he decides to leave the White Sox . . . One of them felt him out a year or so back, but it was no soap.

Jimmy Braddock will get $1,500 for refereeing Krieger-Hostak in Seattle June 27 . . . He'll fly to Yakima in time to umpire a ball game the day before and hopes to fly back in time to see Louis and Galento, June 28 . . . Joe Di Maggio says you can quote him that the White Sox are the best and most merciless jockeys in the majors.

Former Orrick Mayor Is Not Located

ORRICK, Mo., June 23.—(AP)—No trace was found Thursday of W. T. Brasher, 69, former mayor, justice of the peace and hardware merchant, who disappeared Tuesday night from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clarence Gooch.

Mr. Brasher retired from business three years ago. Mrs. Gooch said she talked with him about 8 o'clock Tuesday night as he lay on a cot in the smokehouse at her home. At 9 o'clock he had disappeared.

Officers searched for him near the Santa Fe bridge over Keeney Creek a mile west of his home. His hat, raincoat and tobacco sack were found near the bridge. No trace of him was found in the area near the creek.

His daughter said he was in good physical and mental health and she could not account for his disappearance.

Pickets Picket Pickets At Milling Plant

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—(AP)—Pickets picketed pickets at a milling plant, until police decided it was illegal.

Wives of nearly a dozen CIO demonstrators appeared carrying such signs as: "My husband is one of these damn fools," "Walking won't feed our children" and "How about our car payments?"

Police warned the women that they violated a city ordinance limiting the number of pickets and persuaded them to go home.

Galento And Louis Be Held To The Rules

Both Fighters Say No Fouling Will Mar The Battle

POMPTON LAKES, N. J. June 23.—The possibility of a "pier 6 brawl" between Joe Louis and Tony Galento in Yankee stadium Wednesday night had the New York state athletic commission in such a dither today it was ready to toss the book at the two battlers as a warning.

General John J. Phelan, the commission chairman, was to irked at reports of a rough and tumble that he waved the entire blue book under the noses of a dozen or so assembled fight writers to prove that such a thing can't happen here.

"Why," the General emphasized after putting the official okay on Joe at his training camp here, "if such a thing comes to pass, either or both men can be disqualified."

It had been the general belief no fight could be stopped because of unfair tactics, ever since the famous "no foul" rule was adopted. But the rules show otherwise under a section devoted to major fouls.

This states definitely that the referee "shall disqualify any boxer" for (1) hitting an opponent who is down or is getting up after being down, (2) using the knee, (3) purposely going down without being hit, and (4) "failure to obey the referee; or any physical actions which may injure a contestant by fair and sportsmanlike boxing."

"That fourth section," the General explained, "leaves it squarely and definitely up to the referee. And the referee will be so instructed."

Neither Louis, who took off and will wind up training with four rounds of sparring tomorrow, four Sunday and four Monday, nor the Orange barkeep Galento, who works today, Saturday and Sunday, were particularly excited about the General's to-do concerning the rules.

"Y'see this?" Tony asked the boys at his Summit, N. J., camp, holding out a short, thick left arm, which bore a considerable resemblance to a moss-covered oak log. "Well, we'll just flatten dat bum with this baby—and we won't have to foul him doing it."

"Wha' fo' all the fuss," was Louis' comment. "I ain't gonna do no fouling. We can still throw a lot of tough punches without putting them where they ain't supposed to be."

Stay Away From Camp

NEW YORK, June 23.—I'm going to stay away from Tony Galento's training camp before I catch myself picking the big palooka to knock out Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship next Wednesday night.

The Galento of today, five days before the fight, looks like a mean proposition to face in a small ring. He has worked himself into finer condition than any of the local critics thought possible. That beer stomach of his has almost disappeared, and in its place is only a hard bulge that seems to get in with the rest of his strange physique. Yesterday he fought four tough rounds without blowing, and he was throwing punches constantly.

Don't get me wrong. Louis still is a 1-to-9 favorite, and those odds probably are about right. The Negro is a great champion and is the only sane choice in this camp. But I'm beginning to suspect the thing is not cut-and-dried, and that the crowd is likely to get its money's worth.

While it lasts, the fight might produce the wildest, craziest bit of action seen in a ring since Dempsey and Firpo went berserk under the lights. Jim Braddock, the ex-champion, had the same hunch after watching Tony work out yesterday.

"Tony's got a hell of a chance if he fights Louis like he was fighting today," said Jim, who had the Negro on the floor before losing the title to him in Chicago. "Joe doesn't like that kind of fighting, and he hasn't been looking good lately."

Tony, in good condition probably for the first time since he sold his ice wagon, is throwing that murderous left of his faster than you would believe possible to look at him. He throws it in a wide, swishing arc as he leaps forward. That's about all he's doing in preparation for Louis, but he's half-killing his sparring partners with it.

Clearly, now, he doesn't intend to crouch and cover as he moves in on the champion. He means to take a good run and jump in behind that left, and to climb aboard Louis with arms, knees and noggin.

Gene Tunney Is The Father of a Daughter

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, today became the father of an eight pound daughter.

Mrs. Tunney, the former Polly Lauder, was resting comfortably in Harkness Pavilion. The Tunneys have three sons.

Paper wasps build their nests of wood pulp paper, which they make by shaving thin films of wood from wood surfaces. This material is made into a plaster by mixing it with a gummy secretion in the insect's mouth.

Gehrig Says Goodby to Yankees

Coming In Second Of 'Dr. Kildare' Series

The adventures of the young medico-detective introduced in "Young Dr. Kildare" are continued in the second of the series, "Calling Dr. Kildare," which comes to the Liberty screen Sunday and Monday. Lew Ayres again plays the title role, with Lana Turner and Laraine Day, prominently involved in the romantic episodes of the new story.

Martha Raye In 'Give Me A Sailor' at Uptown Today and Saturday

Martha Raye crashes the nation's headlines as the winner of a million-dollar legs contest and becomes a coast-to-coast celebrity in "Give Me a Sailor," feature No. One, at the Uptown theatre today and Saturday. Bob Hope, Betty Barble and Jack Whiting appear in the supporting roles of this fast comedy. Martha Raye has a role which marks a turning point in her tempestuous screen career. After going through half the picture as a meek household Patsy who comes out of the kitchen only to serve the food she has cooked, she suddenly turns into a glamor girl of the first rank, the winner of a national beautiful legs contest and the pampered darling of the press and radio. Bob Hope is seen as the romantic gob who plots with Miss Raye to get her married off to his brother but engineers a match he does not expect.

Second feature on the Uptown program is "Frontiers of '49" with Bill Elliott in the leading role.

Strong Recovery To Wheat Market

CHICAGO, June 23.—(AP)—The wheat market staged its strongest recovery in three weeks today, rallying more than a cent a bushel from the lowest prices quoted here in two months.

Factors that helped to reverse the market's recent downward course included revival of milling demand, congressional approval of the farm benefit program and scattered unfavorable crop reports from the spring wheat belt.

Wheat closed 1 to 1⅜ cents higher than yesterday, July 69¾c to 69⅞c, September 70⅝c to 70¾c; corn ⅝ to 1 cent up, July 48½c to 48⅝c, September 50c; oats ⅜ to ¾ cent higher.

Modest Rally By Selected Stocks

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—A little short covering and quick-turn buying, based on the belief sellers were about out of ammunition, enabled selected stocks to put on a modest rallying sortie in today's market.

With offering dwindling to a mere handful, after a slow forenoon decline, a brief upward flurry near the final hour cancelled early fractional set-backs in many sases and lifted favorites as much as a point or so. Closing prices, however, were under the best, and an assortment of small minus signs was in evidence.

While the activity was still a matter of concern for the commission houses, transfers of approximately 475,000 shares were among the largest in several sessions.

The business outlook, brokers thought, provided the principal incentive to recovery. At that, skeptical traders were plentiful and these inclined to stick to neutral territory pending more assurances stocks may be at or near bottom.

The Far Eastern British-Japanese dispute was still viewed as a market cloud and financial quarters seemingly were a bit disappointed at the lackadaisical response of shares to yesterday's outline of the administration's latest lending program.

Trade Volume Ahead of The Past Year

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—Despite unfavorable weather in some centers, which give retail trade a slow start, the past week's volume averaged 8 to 12 per cent over the like period of last year, the Dunn and Bradstreet weekly review reported today.

Shackleford To A Labor Post

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23—(AP)—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark today named Earl Shackelford of Hannibal state labor commissioner to succeed Mary Edna Cruzen of Gallatin.

The release of Mrs. Cruzen, a holdover from the park administration, had been expected since the inception of the governor's feud with the T. J. Pendergast Democratic organization.

Shackelford, former state commander of the American Legion, operates a printing establishment in Hannibal. At present he is a referee for the workmen's compensation commission.

The appointment is effective July 3, when Mrs. Cruzen's present term will expire. Shackleford will serve until July, 1943. The governor sent the appointment up for the "advice and consent" of the senate, although that body will not act on it since it takes effect after adjournment of the legislature.

In a statement accompanying the appointment, Stark said Shackelford was " a member of four union labor organizations and has been active in labor circles for a number of years."

Mrs. Cruzen first was appointed in 1933, then re-appointed in 1935 for a four-year term. She took the office with Pendergast's endorsement — a qualification that soured for any number of state jobholders when the governor began his war on the Kansas City Democratic organization.

Capitol reports have been current for months that Sen. Bennett Champ Clark, a friend of the governor, was unfriendly to Mrs. Cruzen as labor commissioner.

The labor commissioner has charge of the enforcement of all labor laws and industrial inspections.

Early Day News Artist Is Dead

ST. LOUIS, June 23.—(AP)—Miss Martha Hoke, 78, early-day newspaper artist and well-known painter, died Thursday of heart disease.

Miss Hoke's father, Joseph W. Hoke, invented a chalk-plate process for transfer of pictures to the printed page without an in-between reproduction on stone, wood or copper.

Her advent as a newspaper artist was dramatic. In 1885, a murder at the old Southern hotel here made national news. Upon discovery of the body Miss Hoke was summoned, made a hurried sketch, and two hours later the old St. Louis Republic published an extra carrying the picture of the scene.

Later she turned to miniatures, and for many years maintained a studio in Providencetown, Mas., where she spent her summers.

Fireworks Blasts In Sales Depot

CHICAGO, June 23—(AP)—Residents of western suburbs were awakened early today by an unwelcomed premature Fourth of July bombardment, when an estimated $50,000 stock of fireworks blew up in a retail sales depot in Leyden township.

Frank Folisi, 34, a night watchman, told police three men, approached him with the warning, "be quiet or we'll burn you and the firecrackers." He said he was placed in a parked car and bound with rope.

A few minutes later, he said the depot exploded. The depot was occupied by the Acme fireworks company. Harry Cohen, head of the firm, estimated the loss at $50,000.

Thousands of residents, awakened by the blasts, drove to the scene.

"The Bear Went Over the Mountain"
You remember why, don't you? Certainly. It was "to see what he could see."
And it's for just this same beautifully simple reason that thousands of knowing people run through the advertisements in their daily newspapers.
For, it seems, civilized men and women are seldom satisfied with their lot. In this ever-producing age they have an insatiable appetite for something new which may make life brighter. That something may be an electric razor, or new summer clothes . . . a good book, or a ride in a streamlined train.
So they turn the newspaper pages to see what they can see. There they're able to find what it is, why it is, where it is, and how much it is. And the advertisements say, "Come and get it!"

Senate Okays Addition To State Patrol

Appropriation Is Hiked To Pay 50 New Patrolmen

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23.—(AP)—The senate cast an overwhelming 28 to 5 vote of confidence in the state highway patrol Thursday and sent to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark a bill adding 50 troopers to its present force of 115.

Funds to pay and equip the new men were voted tonight with adoption of an appropriations amendment increasing the highway patrol's funds for 1939 and 1940 nearly $200,000—making the department's total $1,323,813 for the two years. The vote on the additional money was 17 to 14.

Sponsors of the bill—introduced by Rep. Ed Caldwell (D), Ralls county—estimated it would cost about $100,000 a year to pay the 50 additional men and to buy and operate the 15 new patrol cars they would require.

Attacks On Arrests

Opponents based their principal attacks on the measure upon arguments which created bitter debate when it scraped through the house by a 2-vote margin: that it had departed from "its original purpose of patrolling the highways and become a state police force."

"The patrol has become attached to sheriffs' offices so much that the sheriffs have practically quit doing anything and the patrol is having to do their work," declared Sen. Phil M. Donnelly (D), Lebanon.

He proposed an amendment to transfer the patrol's appropriation from the highway fund to general revenue.

"If they are going to do crime detection instead of patroling the highways, then they hadn't ought to be paid out of funds meant for use on the roads," he argued.

Defends Patrol's Work

That brought Sens. Francis Smith (D), St. Joseph, W. B. Whitlow (D), Fulton, and Frank Briggs (D), Macon, to the patrol's defense.

"Two thirds of its arrests are for purely highway and traffic violations, and 90 per cent of its criminal arrests arise directly from the criminals' use of the roads," Smith said.

"We are not asking this increase because of the patrol's criminal activities, but for adequate performance of its primary duty—patroling the highways. It would have justified this increase if it had never arrested a single criminal."

Donnelly's amendment went down, 17 to 14.

"KRUGON SEEMED TO BE MADE FOR ME"

Said Mrs. Frank; Was A Constant Sufferer Of Constipation; Forced To Take the Strongest Laxatives

to get any relief. Every morning for the past three years I would awaken with a dull headache that would increase during the day. I was sluggish and irritable all the time and my digestion was greatly affected until I would suffer indigestion attacks after each meal. Then my left limb and foot began to trouble me by swelling, aching and paining so badly I could hardly stand it. I exhausted every effort to gain relief before I finally learned of KruGon and put it to the test."

"I had taken lots of different medicines but none that can be compared with KruGon's action," continued Mrs. Frank. "My bowels are now regular and I do not have to resort to strong laxatives. That sluggish, worn-out feeling has been relieved as I rest well at night and rise with refreshened strength and energy. My meals are a source of enjoyment for me since I no longer suffer with ill after effects. Those dreadful pains and swelling are gone from my limb and foot also and I am thankful for having given KruGon the opportunity of helping me."

KruGon is sold by MacFarland and Robinson Drug Co., 104 W. Main St., this city, and by the leading druggists in surrounding towns.

Green Charges Scheme By CIO

WASHINGTON, June 23.—William Green, president of the AFL, has told his state federations and central labor unions that the rival CIO, operating through the American Newspaper Guild, had launched a plan to "color the policy" of labor newspaper in favor of CIO.

In a circular letter, Green asserted that the CIO had offered to "cooperate with all labor publications which are operated ostensibly for the membership of the American Federation of Labor."

"It is obvious," Green wrote, "that such a scheme would indoctrine American Federation of Labor members who read these newspapers, in favor of the CIO.

"It has also been called to our attention that many of these so-called AFL publications have in many instances, ridiculed the position of the American Federation of Labor and its executive council on important legislative matters that were thoroughly considered by the American Federation of Labor before they were offered to congress."

Green added that he had been informed many of the labor papers "in lieu of taking and ad, accept money which is a dangerous policy, because no concern is going to give any newspaper money without attempting to get information which will obviously be used to the detriment to the particular workers involved."

Len Decaux, editor of the CIO News, commenting later, said the CIO had no plan to work through the Newspaper Guild to "indoctrine" the labor press.

"We send out a regular weekly news service," Decaux said, "but it has nothing to do with the Guild's efforts to make a study of the problems confronting the labor press."

Addition To Fund For Relief

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23—(AP)—The senate scorned Gov. Lloyd C. Stark's request for a bigger social security appropriation today but managed to increase the money for direct relief by taking it away from old age pension funds.

The changes must be agreed to by the house before the bill can go to the governor.

Warning of an approaching crisis in the state's direct relief situation, the governor last week asked the senate to boost the social security appropriation for this year and next from $29,750,000 to about $32,000,000. Bulk of the added money would have gone for relief.

The senate committee followed the governor's suggestion but Sen. W. B. Whitlow (D) Fulton filed a substitute amendment which was adopted, thereby killing the contemplated increase in the total. However, it added $1,500,000 to the direct relief fund.

Whitlow's amendment cut old age pension funds from the house approved $19,500,000 to $17,500,000; boosted relief money from $5,000,000 to $6,500,000 and administration funds from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000. The $3,250,000 appropriation for aid to dependent children was left unchanged.

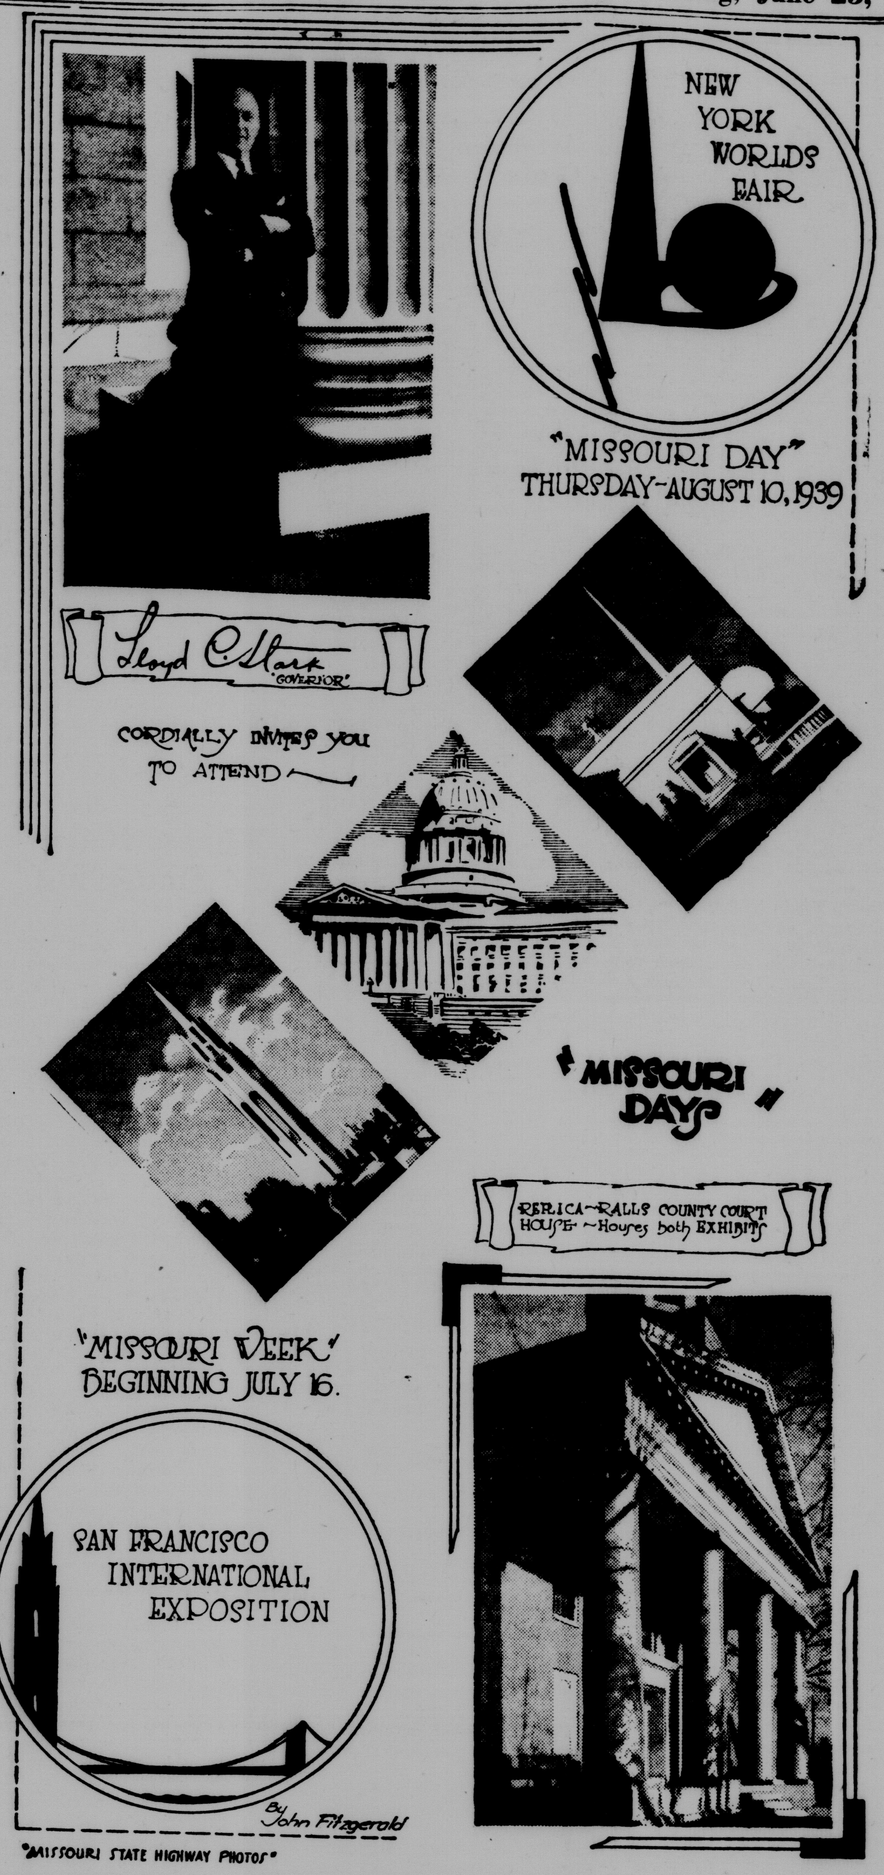

The Whitlow figures left unchanged the social security total of $29,750,000.

Champions Two Term Tradition

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senator Overton (D-La) championed the two-term tradition today, and predicted President Roosevelt would not be a candidate for a third term in 1940.

The Louisianan said in an interview that the tradition was as old as the nation itself and should not be broken.

"I consider it," he said, "an unwritten provision of our constitution, hallowed by time and sanctified by the unbroken precedent of almost a century and a half of our national life.

"Furthermore, I have too high a regard for the President to think that he would even contemplate violating the traditional policy of our nation in this regard."

Praise Rescues From Squalus

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 23—(AP)—Unstinted praise for men whose lives swayed in the balance while they rescued 33 members of the crew of the submarine Squalus was put in the record of a naval court of inquiry today by Rear Admiral Syrus W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard.

The heroism of divers William Badders of Washington and John Mikaloski of Worcester was given particular attention by the soft spoken officer who has been in charge of rescue and salvage operations since the May 23 tragedy in which 26 were drowned. The two divers he mentioned made the fifth and last descent in the rescue chamber to determine that none in the flooded after section of the submarine lived.

"Divers badders and Mikaloski went down with full knowledge that if they were incapitated or temporarily knocked out there was no chance on earth of their being rescued," Admiral Cole testified. "The rescue chamber was attached to the after hatch and practically was an integral part of the submarine. They were under high pressure and in great danger. They performed magnificently and deserve the greatest consideration."

He also commended Martin C. Sebitsky, another diver attached to the rescue ship Falcon, who was first to descend to the disabled submarine and who attached a descending line to the rescue chamber subsequently brought the 33 survivors to the surface.

"Sebitsky was working in extreme cold," said the admiral, "and under high pressure. I mean actually high pressure."

In general, Cole praised "every member of the rescue group, including Commander A. E. McCann, who is credited with the invention of the rescue chamber, and Lt. Com. Charles B. Momsen, inventor of the Monsen lung.

"They worked under tremendous strain," he said, "but gave no indication of any excitement."

Back Wages To Be A Problem

ST. LOUIS, June 23—(AP)—One of the contingent liabilities of the bankrupt Hamilton-Brown Shoe company will present a problem for which there is no precedent.

It is the claim for back wages of 103 former employes at the Union, Mo., plant who won a national labor relations board decision, later upheld in the United States circuit court of appeals.

CIO union attorneys, representing these claimants, have estimated the total claim at $150,000.

The supreme court has upheld back pay awards to employes fired in violation of the Wagner act, but the question as to the status of such awards has never come up before in a bankruptcy case.

The company, once the largest manufacturer of shoes in America, was adjudicated a bankrupt yesterday.

A meeting of the more than 5000 creditors of the firm probably will be called early next month to elect a trustee, referee in bankruptcy Elmer E. Pearcy said today.

He explained the date would depend on how soon his office could prepare a complete list of creditors with claims amounting to more than $970,000. Trustees appointed after the concern had filed a petition for reorganization last April will make their final report July 3.

Grave May Be That of First White Child

GAINESVILLE, Ga., June 23—(AP)—The roughly carved lettering of a granite slab that may prove to be the gravestone of Virginia Dare, first white child born in America, was disclosed today by Dr. H. J. Pearce, president of Brenau college.

In addition to Virginia Dare, the stone bears the names of her father, Ananias Dare, and of 15 others presumably murdered by Indians in 1591, four years after they set foot on the new world. It is signed with the name of Eleanor Dare, mother of Virginia.

Dr. Pearce said that if the authenticity of this and a companion stone now in the Brenau college museum can be established, the mystery of Sir Walter Raleigh's famed "lost colony" will be near solution.

Desires Monetary Power Extended

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today he would ask for new legislation to continue his monetary powers if the two-year extension bill pending in the senate was killed by filibuster.

Asked at a press conference whether he would seek new legislation in event the senate filibuster continued beyond June 30, when existing powers to devalue the dollar and operate the stabilization fund expire, the President replied in the affirmative and added it would be done this session.

The senate was scheduled to resume consideration of the extension measure today after an interruption yesterday when it passed the tax bill.

In addition to extending devaluation authority, the bill pending would continue authority to purchase domestic sliver above world market prices.

Senators interested in the treasury's maintaining or advancing the price presently paid for domestic silver have debated the monetary bill at length since it reached the floor. The treasury now pays 64.64 cents an ounce.

Denying they were filibustering, they have referred to their tactics as designed to provide "full discussion," but some have indicated that unless they gained their point on the silver price level they might talk the bill to death.

Execute Negro In Holdup Killing

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 23.—(AP)—Haunted in his last hours by memories of his crime, James Reed Swain, 20, a Negro, was executed in the electric chair at state prison early today for the holdup murder of Christ Bredenkamp, Evansville grocer, in 1937.

Swain told the Rev. Robert Hall, prison champain, several days ago that Bredenkamp kept "visiting" him in his cell at night.

"He looks just like he did the night I shot him," Hall quoted Swain as saying. "He just stands there in his long white apron and his glasses. I can't sleep when I see him."

Life In Prison For Arson Deaths

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 23—(AP)—State supreme court Justice William A. Gold sentenced John J. Coogan, 39, today to four concurrent life terms in Attica state prison for the arson-deaths of an elderly man and three children.

The state charged the unemployed trucker set fire to waste paper placed in a milk bottle receptacle in the home of William B. Clark, Jr., his former employer, last March 11. The victims, 78-year-old William B. Clark, Sr., his two grandchildren and the children's overnight guest, were asleep.

Signs Bill To Settle Dispute

JEFFERSON CITY, June 23—(AP)—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark's signature on a senate bill completed action by Missouri today to settle a 50-year-old boundary dispute with Iowa.

The measure, similar to a bill already passed and approved in Iowa, would give Missouri 2,000 acres of land now on the south side of the Des Moines river and transfer to Iowa 208 acres of Missouri soil now in the north side of the river.

The dispute was caused by a shift in the course of the river. The land is in and adjacent to Clark county at the extreme northeast boundary of the state.

The new jurisdiction will become effective on the December 31 after passage of an act of congress approving the exchange.

committee, asserted that when treasury Secretary Morgenthau asked congress earlier in the session to raise the federal debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000 this "provoked such hostility the administration withdrew it."

"Now we find the Roosevelt administration undertaking to do through the back door what it was denied at the front door," he declared.

"Once the budget act and the statutory debt limitation are in effect wiped out, there no safeguard against reckless spending."

Taber added that "none should be deceived by this sugar-coating about 'self-liquidating' projects.

"Let it be understood from the beginning," he said, "that a good portion of the funds which the President now wants the government to lend will be, if made available, lost in the years to come and that these billions will have to be paid by taxes levied on all the people."

Mr. Roosevelt was asked at the press conference whether the government would contribute toward the cost of express highways proposed under the lending program since they would have a military value. He said he did not think so.

He also told reporters that only public and quasi-public groups would be eligible to borrow under the program.

He said he did not believe the interest rate should vary according to types, which seemed to be solvent, wanted new equipment, the two would probably be lumped together to provide the same rate.

Asked whether loans to foreign governments to promote foreign trade would be prohibited to governments which defaulted on privately bought securities, the President said there was some relation in the proposal to such countries, but not very much.

He said it comes down to the question of current soundness. He recalled certain bonds of South American governments which New York banks sold to private investors in 1920 under high pressure methods and added, he could not see where what he called the ancient frauds of the 1920's had much to do with sound loans now.

The President explained that many of the projects proposed would be those which private bankers would not care to go in on because of insufficient spread in the loans.

As an example, he recalled that when he was governor of New York, the American Legion got through the legislature a toll road project on White Face Mountain. He said a survey showed it would pay its own way but that private bidders refused to bid on the bonds because there was not much spread.

The state controller, he added, bought the bonds himself for the state and they have been paying ever since.

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—In the face of mixed congressional reaction, administration leaders in the senate and house promised prompt consideration today of President Roosevelt's new $3,060,000,00 lending program.

Because congress already is rushed with pre-adjournment legislation, there were some expressions of doubt that it could enact this session the six-point, seven-year plan involving projects classified as self-liquidating.

Legislative lieutenants said action this year would depend on the extent of new legislation needed.

After informal discussions, the leaders and interested committee chairmen are expected to accept the president's invitation to talk over the situation at the white house.

Designed to stimulate business and employment without costing the treasury any money, the president's program would authorize loans for various purposes, among them:

To states, cities and counties for sewers, bridges, hospitals, etc.; to a new federal toll authority for toll bridges and express highways; to another federal corporation for purchase of railroad equipment; to farm tenants for purchase of land; to the rural electrification administration, and to the export-import bank to finance foreign purchases in this country.

Besides the $3,060,000,000 in loans, the program would allow the United States housing authority to borrow an extra $800,000,000 to finance housing projects.

Total Outlay for Year

The total outlay for the year beginning next July 1 would be $870,000,000.

Senator Byrnes, to whom the program was submitted as a substitute for the house provision earmarking $125,000,000 of WPA funds for more PWA projects, said he doubted whether the new legislation could be tacked on the $1,735,000,000 relief bill because of the "time element." The relief bill must be passed by June 30 when existing WPA funds give out.

Administration supporters generally praised the president's plan on the ground that it would help stimulate private industry at a time when it is greatly needed.

Economy advocates expressed skepticism, however, of the president's contention that the program would not affect the budget. Mr. Roosevelt said the whole plan could be financed through issuance of guaranteed securities by government agencies "with good prospect of repayment of both principal and interest through earnings."

Republicans viewed the proposal as political, and some said they saw in it an opening wedge for a "third term" announcement.

Many congressmen of both parties criticized the provision expanding the borrowing power of the export-import bank, so that it could lend $500,000,000 additional in two years to foreign governments to promote foreign trade.

They promised a stiff fight on this feature.

As for the railroad equipment purchases, Chairman Wheeler (D-Mont) of the senate interstate commerce committee said he preferred lending the narriers money at lower rates of interest.

Most legislators agreed that the program was intended to end any more PWA long-grant projects.

Typical of the favorable comments was that of Senator Wagner (D-NY), who said it would help "stimulate durable goods industries which particularly need help at this time."

Senator King (D-Utah), an economy group spokesman, said he was opposed to voting for "any permanent lending program" at this time because "we don't know what the future holds."

Senator Johnson (R-Calif) said the "whole scheme would be very effective in the election of 1940," while Senator Bridges (R-NH) asserted:

"It looks to me as though he's laying the way for announcing his candidacy for a third term."

Indignant Over Insults From The Japanese

servative, was cheered when he asked:

"Is the prime minister aware that the temper of the British people is rising and will be entirely behind him when he refers to 'intolerable insults'?"

Chamberlain did not reply.

British and French far eastern army and navy chiefs, meeting in Singapore to discuss defense problems, watched the latest moves in China closely. In informed quarters it was said the vice-admiral Sir Percy Noble, commander-in-chief of British naval forces in the far east, might speed up his return from Singapore to China.

Although this could not be confirmed immediately it was pointed out that outstanding matters at the Singapore conference could be concluded without his presence in view of the fact that the most important decisions already had been reached.

These decisions were not disclosed, but it was reported the conferees were "in complete accord."

Demands came from many sides today that the British government deal firmly with the Japanese.

Members of parliament harried the government in the house of commons. Newspapers declared the time had come for action.

No comment came from the foreign office on reports Britons were insulted by Japanese police but a government spokesman said maintenance of the blockade would "Obviously lead to counter measures by Britain."

The Times of London said: "Public opinion would welcome an assurance that retaliatory measures to meet this eventuality have in fact already been studied."

Lord Halifax sent messages of assurance to Tientsin that the government would make every effort to protect British interests. Informed circles felt, however, British officials still relied on a statement by Japan to end the difficulties.

At the same time diplomatic observers saw seeds of another setback to British foreign policy in Soviet Russian coolness to French-British efforts to bring Russia into the London-Paris front.

Study Be Made For Overhaul In Revenue to increase income taxes on middle-bracket incomes. (Under parliamentary procedure, amendments fail on a tie.)

Chairman Harrison (D Miss) of the senate finance committee, opposed the LaFollette proposals on the ground that they would impede enactment of the tax bill.

The senate turned once more today to debate-porvoking legislation to extend the administration's emergency monetary powers for two years.

Silver-state senators, denying they were filibustering, have been holding up a vote on the monetary bill with prolonged speechmaking. The measure was sidetracked yesterday to permit speedy passage of the tax bill, but Senator McCarran (D-Nev), a leader of the silver bloc, said he would oppose any further interruption.

The silver group is motivated by a desire to learn from the treasury what price it will pay for domestically-mined silver after June 30, when the present bounty price expires.

Senator Adams (D-Colo) was hopeful of obtaining a quick vote on his proposal to eliminate from the monetary bill the President's authority to devalue the dollar

The agriculture department supply bill cleared a major hurdle when the house approved late yesterday senate additions of $338,000,000 for farm parity payments and surplus crop disposal

The house clipped $26,510,000 from the compromise $1,205,147,000 farm bill, however, and sent it back to a joint senate-house committee for study of the reductions.

A senate appropriations subcommittee neared the end of its work on the $1,735,000,000 relief mill, and arranged to send the measure to the senate floor early next week. The WPA will have no operating funds unless the measure reaches Mr. Roosevelt's desk by June 30.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The house concurred today in minor senate amendments to the business tax revisions bill and sent the measure to President Roosevelt for his signature.

The legislation, rushed through both houses of congress in less than a week, wipes out the undivided profits tax, which many business men denounced, and fixes a flat 18 per cent levy for large corporations.

Haste in pushing the bill through congress was motivated by expiration a week from today, of excise levies, which the measure reenacts.

Congressional leaders meanwhile called for a post-adjournment study looking toward a top-to-bottom overhaul of the revenue structure next year.

Sen. Nye For The Townsend Plan

Wash) and Rep. Gerald Landis (R-Ind).

Says Not Fantastic

Smith said in his address, "There is nothing fantastic or absurd about our proposal excepting the expressed views of those who discuss it and write about it without apparently ever having made any study or investigation of the subject matter, nor the factual information relating to it."

Smith explained the Townsendites propose to prorate among pensioners past 60 years of age, who cease gainful employment and agree to spend the pensions within thirty days, the proceeds from a two per cent transactions tax on retail sales and a one-half of one per cent tax on the gross revenues of all producers, manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers.

He estimated the aggregate total yield would be $5,400,000,000 annually at first. "This sum to be divided among 8,000,000 pensioners of the age of 60 years and past and amounting to $56.26 per month for the first year, and, of course, certain to increase commensurate with the increase in money circulation, velocity and turnover, and consequent increase in gross business turnover and business transactions."

Landis, in discussing the Townsend plan bill recently defeated in the house, said in his prepared speech, "Give us the Townsend plan, and we will not need the WPA, crop control and many other government agencies."

"I shall not quit fighting," he declared, "until justice is done for the old folks of our nation."

Yesterday, Senator Sheridan Downey (D-Calif) told the convention opposition to the Townsend movement is "crumbling."

"Time and tide," said Downey, "are fighting with us. The leaders in Washington are getting ready to make Dr. Townsend's brainchild their own progeny."

Burglary Cinch As Law Sleeps

KANSAS CITY, Kas., June 23.—An unidentified Negro robber learned last night when the law sleeps, burglary is a cinch.

At midnight the Negro entered the home of Police Sergt. William H. Carr. The front door was unlocked awaiting return of Carr's son, William, Jr.

The Negro waited, revolver ready. At 12:15 a. m., young Carr walked in. The Negro took 20 cents from him then ordered him to conduct him through the rooms. In the bedroom where the elder Carr slept soundly, the robber took $14 from a billfold. In another room where Miss Edna Carr, an aunt, was sleeping, the burglar took $4. Miss Carr is a secretary in the office of the federal bureau of investigation in Kansas City, Mo.

Blockade Irks The Americans

sized that the step was not a formal protest, said that such representations had been made at least once daily since the blockade started.

Japanese gendarmes disregarded official British complaints today and continued their thorough examinations of Britons attempting to pass barriers surrounding Tientsin's blockaded British and French concessions.

Few Britons attempted to pass the barricades, but those who did were seized upon at once for lengthy searching by Japanese, who have advised all foreigners to be more polite and refrain from assuming an arrogant attitude with sentries.

The conduct of the gendarmes has been a point of friction in the Tientsin dispute. Great Britain charged in a statement by the consulate general that eight British subjects had been forced to submit to indignities, including stripping and lengthy examination in full view of Chinese coolies.

Another source of irritation has been the electrically-charged wire with which Japanese surrounded the isolated foreign areas. A Chinese coolie was found dead today, his hand grasping the wire, not far from American marine barracks outside the blockaded concessions.

Almost Rubbed Elbows

Japanese sentries guarding the Japanese end of the international bridge between the French concession and Japanese occupied territory advanced several yards onto the bridge during the night until they almost elbows with French and Chinese police stationed at the other end. French authorities took no official notice of the change but French circles expressed resentment.

Thus far, the blockade has been directed mainly at Britons, with Japanese apologizing for blockading the French concession because it adjoins the British area.

Non-British foreigners passed the barriers quickly today. All consulates had received a form letter from Japanese consul-general Shigenori Tashiro asking that their nationals be advised to carry identification cards when seeking to pass barriers and to be more polite.

With the blockade now in its tenth day, the food situation worsened. British officials prepared to bring supplies in their own boats from Shanghai and elsewhere if necessary.

Fresh milk was available, but meat and vegetables were scarce. British concession markets had allotments of 100 pounds of meat, which was quickly sold. There was no seafood. Prices continued to soar.

At police headquarters later the woman said the bandit was Anthony Hessler, alias "Phillip," 27, of Detroit, and identified herself as his wife, Hildegrade Phillip.

Agreement To Barter Cotton To Get Rubber

bales of United States cotton. Against this, Great Britain would accumulate for the United States stocks of rubber for any emergency.

When the barter deal was first mentioned, the United States was said to have planned to exchange wheat and cotton for rubber and tin, but this led to the Canadian protests on the grounds that the inclusion of wheat would harm the Canadian wheat market.

Canada also protested the whole idea of the exchange arrangement as being contrary to her trade relations with the United States and Great Britain as exemplified in trade treaties.

In Washington, officials of the agriculture department said it was probable that cotton for the exchange would be taken from stocks of 11,300,000 bales accumulated in warehouses throughout the south as collateral for government price-pegging loans to growers.

Officials said legislation probably would be necessary to consummate the trade. They explained that existing law denies the government the right to sell any loan cotton unless it can get from such sales the amount it has invested in loans, handling charges and benefit payments. The barter arrangement would not bring such a return, they said.

Not Conflict in Policy

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Secretary Hull emphatically asserted today that the exchange of American cotton for British rubber, agreed to today in London, was in no sense in conflict with his trade agreements policy.

Hull has repeatedly condemned the German type of barter, but he maintained that the exchange of surplus commodities between Britain and the United States was not barter in the usual sense and would not conflict with the trade agreements program.

(In Berlin, there was a stir among German exponents of the barter system, and one authoriative publication said "Convulsion of the international cotton market can be expected as a result of a transaction of this scale." The German press fibed at the arrangement.

Dies In Chair For Killing Son

REIDSVILLE, Ga., June 23—(AP)—Declaring his innocence to the last, Innkeeper Harvey Nelson died in the electric chair today for the "draw straws" murder of his son, J. C. Nelson.

The 12-year-old boy was shot to death at Nelson's roadhouse near Waycross May 26, 1938, and Nelson later told his trial jury the crime was committed to collect insurance on his son's life. He testified the death shot was fired by Verna Mae Fowler, pretty blonde waitress, after she had drawn straws with another girl to determine which should use the gun.

Search For Body Of Slain Promoter

LANSING, Mich., June 23.—Police searching parties, on foot and in motorcars, combed lonely Clinton County side roads, searching today for the body of George Hall, 56-year-old oil promoter reported to have been the victim of a hitchhike slaying.

Miss Ruby Colby, of Pinconning, told investigators a hitchhiker whom she and Hall had picked up in Hall's motorcar shot and killed her companion and dumped the body in some bushes at the side of a road. The killer then made love to her, she said, as he held her a prisoner in the car.

Witness Refers To Smuggling

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—(AP)—A detective testified today of friendly conversations about such matters as perfumes and pajamas which he said preceded the arrest of Rev. Joe Jeffers and his wife, Zella Joy, on morals charges.

The witness in the Jeffers' morals trial was Vincent Higgins, a district attorney's investigator, who occupied an apartment adjoining that of the Jeffers and was known to them as "Vincent Casey, Hollywood writer."

"She took me into her boudoir and showed me some of the perfumes she had brought back from Europe," Higgins related of his visit with Mrs. Jeffers. "She described some of the aromas as 'sin', 'oriental' and 'taboo.'

"While we talked she took a slender glass rod out of a perfume bottle and put a little back of each of my ears."

Their conversation, he said, was on the afternoon preceding a champagne party in the Jeffers apartment during which detectives burst into the bedroom to take motion pictures of the preacher and his wife.

Higgins testified Mrs. Jeffers told him she had smuggled about $2,000 worth of perfume into this country and that the preacher had described amethod by which he said i twould be easy to smuggle $10,000 in diamonds past the customs.

He had been detailed by the district attorney to investigate Jeffers in connection with suspected arson and smuggling plans, he said.

Higgins told of a visit to his apartment by Mrs. Jeffers during which he said she admired a suit of red silk pajamas.

"I told her they were mine and she said she would love to wear them sometime," the witness said. "I asked her what her husband would say about that, and she said that he was broadminded and it would be all right with him."

Mrs. Jeffers also admired a red dressing gown, Higgins said, and remarked she would "certainly love to wear this."

Ted Adams Wins In First Round

KANSAS CITY, June 23—(AP)—Ted Adams, the Chillicothe lad who wears the Canadian amateur crown, was an easy victor in the first round of match play in the Missouri State Golf Tournament here today, triumphing over John Harrington of Kansas City, 5 and 4.

R. J. Gardner of Kansas City, co-medalist, eliminated Dr. Bert McDowell of Kansas City, in another of the "sudden death" matches.

Gardner, touring the course in 72, won 2 up. He was one down at the turn but won the first two holes coming in and halved the next six. He won the final with a birdie three.

Second round matches will be played this afternoon.

Jack Geiss, St. Louis, turned in the surprise of the early matches when he eliminated Grable Duvall of St. Joseph, a former champion, 3 and 2.

The two halved the last five holes in two under par figures.

Bob Cochran of St. Louis eliminated his tournament teammate, Gene Fehlig, also of St. Louis, 1 up in 23 holes in the first round's longest match. Fehlig was two up at the turn.

Fines On Four Bookie Managers

ST. LOUIS, June 23—(AP)—Four bookie shop managers were jolted by fairly heavy fines here today—the first time in recent years that a bookie had been fined in city court.

In the past, hundreds of arrests have been made in raids on "smoke shops" but lack of evidence usually resulted in the cases being dropped. This time, however, Judge Mathews ruled testimony of the police was sufficient evidence.

W. E. Wentzelman

William E. Wentzelman, well known former Sedalian, but for many years a resident of Jefferson City, passed away suddenly at his home, 505 Jefferson street, about noon today. Death was due to a heart ailment.

Word was received in Sedalia of his death by B. B. Bettis, a son-in-law of 306 East Thirteenth street. Mrs. Bettis was en route to her parents home at the time having been summoned there early this morning.

Mr. Wentzelman with his family moved from Sedalia about eighteen years ago. At that time he was placed in charge of the drug department of the Missouri state prison under the Republican administration. Upon leaving the position at the prison he opened a drug store of his own in Jefferson City and was operating the same at the time of his death.

While in Sedalia Mr. Wentzelman for several years was connected with the W. E. Bard Drug store, later entering business at Fourth street and Ohio avenue, which he operated several years before going to Jefferson City.

About a month ago Mr. Wentzelman suffered a heart attack and quickly recovered from it and returned to his business. Last Sunday he suffered another attack and also suffered a touch of ptomaine poison and apparently was improving from this attack, and Mrs. Bettis who was called home at that time returned to Sedalia on Monday.

Admits Making False Statement

NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—Mrs. Lillian T. Schrein, on trial on grand larceny charges, testified today that an attorney for Martin Beck, theatrical producer, instructed her to make a false statement to a bank so that he might recover several thousand dollars.

"I had done nothing wrong," said Mrs. Schrein, Beck's niece by marriage and former secretary of his theatrical corporation, "but to save Mr. Beck I swore falsely, before representatives of the bank."

The statement to the bank was "a confession" that she had no authority to sign checks and dispose of securities for the theater corporation. She now is accused of stealing $60,000 from Beck.

Function of the Church

The natural and technical side of Western civilization has advanced out of all proportion to its humane aspect through the use of the sciences in recent years. It has invaded all lands, and brought all races into a continuity for which they are so unprepared that strife is the natural outcome. The efforts of Christian apostles to promote goodwill among men, are the chief instruments in bringing order out of the present chaos. The church deserves our investigation in a mood of appreciation and hope.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

Phil. 1:12-14; 21-24; 3:12-14; II Cor. 4:7, 8 for Sunday, June 25

V. 12. "But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel." Paul's appeal to be tried by Caesar made it necessary to bring witnesses against him to Rome from Jerusalem so that while he was waiting trial he had extended time to preach the gospel; hardships sometimes are Christian opportunities.

V. 13. "So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places." Paul preached to the soldiers that had charge of him, making converts of them and they in turn helped extend the gospel. It is the next man to us that we need to win.

V. 14. "And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear." Paul's zeal, and the respect which was shown him even by the soldiers, had emboldened the majority of the Christians to proclaim the gospel fearlessly.

V. 2. For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Here is Paul's purpose — living is for him so full of Christ, so preoccupied with him and for him, that "Christ" sums it up. There is an advantage to the Christian soul when death comes—all handicaps gone.

V. 22. "But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor; yet what I shall choose I wot not." One engaged in helpful Christian service which he loves has a natural desire to continue in it; but to every one comes the time when this service must be laid down.

V. 23. "For I am in a straight betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better." Here is Paul's conception of life after death — being with Christ. Note the place of desire in Paul's life. It is profitable for us often to examine our desires.

V. 24. "Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." The human side of our life cries out to our friends not to leave one another. No blow is so hard as the death blow.

V. 12. "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended." Paul had not yet attained the resurrection state of which he had just spoken, nor has he been "made perfect" with the heavenly perfection which characterizes that state. In another state he did claim to be perfect (verse 15). The latter part of this verse is well interpreted in these words, "I press on to lay hold of the prize, because Christ first laid hold of me."

V. 13. "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before." Those things of the past which hinder our spiritual progress should be forgotten; but it is well to remember those things that help our spiritual progress.

V. 14. "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The apostle seems to mean that the prize is the high calling. The term "high" suggests that the Apostle has in mind the final issue of the calling which belongs to those who have endured to the end. The race is the Christian life, the goal is absolute Christlikeness; the end of life is the end of the race; the prize is the incorruptible crown of righteousness.

V. 7. 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." The Christian life is a warefare, "Sure I must fight if I would win." Paul is not fighting death, he simply recognizes the end of the road. The secret of his successful life is the fact that he has kept the faith, for "By faith are ye saved."

V. 8. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." The crown of righteousness is a figure of speech portraying a blessed reward which language can not describe. This reward is possible to all.

Wit and Wisdom

A little girl, walking with her father on a starry night, absorbed in contemplation of the skies, on being asked of what she was thinking, replied: "I was thinking that if the wrong side of heaven is so glorious what must the right side be!"

A Tent Revival

There is a tent revival in progress just south of the Assembly of God church at Sixth and Summit streets, with the Steinberg Brothers of Kansas City, as evangelists. Large crowds are enjoying the gospel singing and preaching of these young men. A special invitation is extended to every one to attend these services each evening at 8 o'clock, except Saturdays.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

1. What does Paul's attitude toward death teach us?
2. What makes a life useful?
3. What of the past should be forgotten and what remembered? Why?
4. What is the Christian goal?
5. What does it mean to keep the faith?

CLERICUS says, "Life is significant when it is tested in the light of personal Christian experience expressed in Christian service. That testing may involve hardships and severe criticism and persecutions, all of which offer an opportunity for showing one's personal character.

LESSON PRAYER: "We would determine our choices not by taking the easy way but by taking the right way however hard it strengtn and grace to fight a good fight."

More than $200,000 had been dispatched to China by the Church Committee for China Relief by mid-March, for distribution on non-sectarian and non-political lines to local relief groups throughout that war-ravaged land. With the war and the need continuing, the committee is appealing for sustained giving by the compassionate Christians of America for the saving of lives of Chinese women, children and home-bereft men.

Judge Hill, presiding justice of the New York Juvenile Delinquency Court, and one of the country's foremost crime-jurists, says that 70 per cent of the 6,000 delinquency cases which annually come before him are the result of godless home environment. He said, "As a jurist who judges thousands of crime-broken boys and girls each year I know that religious interests for young people are essential for their moral welfare and future as worthwhile American citizens. Religion is necessary to the happiness of American youth, but it is not enough merely to send children to church. Parents must attend church, for the child follows the example set by father and mother.

Plans are being made for a Latin American conference of Protestant youth to be held in Lima, Peru, in February 1940. This will be the first conference of its kind ever held on this continent. Preparations have been under way for some time and wide interest is being manifested in the various countries. This is another evidence of the growing importance of Protestant youth in Central and South America.

Among the Changs, a large tribe of Assam, India, the first signs of interest in Christianity are appearing. Though most Chang villages have not yet given up head-hunting, the leading man of one village is already a Christian, and about eight households more are ready to come.

The American Tract Society reports that in the year ending March 1938 it distributed 1,262,208 periodicals and publications. Its work is carried on as a worldwide witness to the gospel. The society was organized May 11, 1825. It has printed and distributed the gospel message in 184 languages and dialects.

Self Control

One great task of a parent is that of proper control of the children. When the child is small, because reason and judgment have not appeared, it is necessary that the full responsibility of care and direction of the child be given by the parent.

But in later life when reason and judgment are developed the ideal to be striven for is the removal of external control and its replacement by internal control.

The task of the parents is to impart to the child such guiding principles that will help him to govern himself in the light of ideals and principles of character. There is a tendency too many times for parents to command a child who understands his duty and who by parental commendation would exercise his will power and make the right choices and thus live by the power of self-control rather than parental control.

What Can A Church Do In Promoting World Peace?

The church preaches world peace and prays for it but so far local churches have not been functioning very effectively. There are many organizations not only in the United States but in many European countries that are conducting meetings, producing literature and furnishing speakers, but even so, very few churches are being reached. There is a most helpful leaflet "A Peace Committee in Every Church" published by The Church Peace Union and World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, 70 Fifth Ave., New York City, N. Y., that suggests a practical plan for every church. This leaflet suggests a campaign to organize a peace committee in every church. The purpose of such a committee is indicated in the following principles: (1) The members of every church should become intelligent as to the relations of the United States to other nations, the conditions under which peace is threatened and the various efforts now being made to prevent war; (2) churches must teach that war is a denial of our faith in a God of justice and love; (3) moral factors must be applied to the economic and international relations; (4) churches as well as individuals, should support intelligent legislation and cooperative efforts intended to prevent war.

The Better Way

There is an urge within every one of us toward completion, toward perfection; an urge toward higher and nobler ends. It is an urge for quality and not for quantity. It is in the lower animals that the urged for bigness is seen. Man is not measured so much by his size as by that urge that causes him to rise above the animals around him. He is the inner difference between man and all other creatures. Man lives to go somewhere, to be something, to attain higher levels. The animals of the field have an urge to simply live, to eat and drink, to satisfy the physical hunger and thirst, for they know none other. It is this urge that religion begins and because this urge is natural, religion is natural. This urge is seen in the child that so naturally believes in God. To him the Christ story is sweet and as in the days when he was on earth, the little children take to him. This urge can be accelerated or retarded as one wills. Let this godly impulse be cultivated and it makes one a seeker after God and not satisfied till he is found. Let it be neglected and it loses its driving power and a state of indifference follows and later a state of apathy.

Tombstone, the Town "Too Tough to Die"

WHEN Ed Schieffelin rode alone into the hills of southern Arizona, one day in 1879, the warning of friends still echoed in his ears:

"The stone you'll find will be your tombstone!"

But Schieffelin refused to let even the threat of murderous Apaches halt his search for stones —silver stones.

He found them—a little pile of silver nuggets—between the bleached skeletons of two other prospectors. Nearby he discovered a ledge rich in the metal.

He called his claim "Tombstone," and around it grew a city —"the town too tough to die." In its heyday, around 1881, Tombstone was the "roaringest" of the roaring mining camps, the livest city between the Mississippi and the Pacific. And while the town didn't die, a good many of its 15,000 residents did, many by bullets, a few by hanging.

Money and liquor, gambling and gun fights—by these Tombstone built its reputation. When the silver market collapsed, life grew calmer.

Tombstone is still alive. Although its population has dwindled to 1000, and 60-year-old empty buildings line its streets, it still retains the atmosphere of the past, and tourists peer into its vacant saloons, its deserted theaters.

The adventurous prospector, who, like Schieffelin, faced danger alone to uncover the hidden wealth of Arizona, Nevada, Colorado and other mining states is shown on the U. S. 50-cent olive stamp above, one of the Trans-Mississippi "Omaha" Exposition series of 1898.

Test Yourself: What Do You Know Of Trench Mouth, Harelip, Rabies?

Here are another five questions on health. Five possible answers are given for each question. If you score 100 (20 points for each correct answer), you are well informed. However, if your mark is less than 60, you should attempt to learn more about health and disease.

1.— Trench mouth is the name of a mouth that is (a) too wide; (b) that is too narrow; (c) that is infected with germs; (d) that results from syphilis; (e) that frequently occurs in ditch diggers.

2.—Rabies may be successfully treated by (a) putting on a madstone; (b) by applying the hair of a dog; (c) by inoculation with the Pasteur treatment; (d) by murmuring "abracadabra," (e) by consulting a fortune teller.

3.—Sauerkraut juice is more healthful than tomato juice because (a) it contains more vitamin C; (b) contains more acid; (c) contains more salt; (d) it is not more healthful; (e) it is full of minerals.

4—Harelip is due to the fact that (a) the mother saw a rabbit; (b) the lip failed to grow together; (c) the child's grandfather had a harelip, (d) it should have been twins; (e) it just happened.

5.—Germs live (a) forever; (b) as long as they have food and water; (c) as long as they have sunlight; (d) as long as they have fresh air; (e) as long as they are in the body.

ANSWERS:

1.—Trench mouth is an infection of the gums which was very prevalent under living conditions in the trenches during the World War. It is spread by contamination from infected dishes, kissing, and in similar ways.

2.— Madstones are usually gallstones from a goat or some other animal. They have no value in treating hydrophobia or rabies. The Pasteur method is the only method known for preventing this condition after a person has been bitten by an animal infected with rabies.

3.— Sauerkraut juice is mostly a concentrated solution of salt. It would be more sensible to eat the sauerkraut instead of drinking the juice.

4.—Malformations of the lip are in some instances hereditary although they may not appear in every generation or in all the children born in one generation. They represent a failure of certain structures of the body to develop normally.

5.—Some germs live only outside the human body, and others live only inside. No germs live forever. Dangerous germs are usually destroyed by drying and sunlight. Germs grow and give off new germs; the older ones dying as the new ones develop.

Twins are considered unlucky in many parts of Africa and India.

Ships To Stay Long As Protection Needed

Rejection From United States Of Jap Demand

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—The United States government has bluntly informed Japan that, instead of clearing out of Chinese harbors, its warships will stay in these ports "as long as American citizens are in need of protection or assistance."

Told by the Japanese to take the destroyer Pillsbury out of Swatow, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, chief of the Asiatic fleet, flatly refused. He went even farther, the navy department disclosed today, and brought in another destroyer, the Pope. The gunboat Asheville will follow, from Hongkong.

Some 40 Americans are at Swatow, rich South China port which had transhipped millions of dollars worth of war materials to Chinese forces before the Japanese occupied it yesterday.

The navy department said today Admiral Harry E. Yarnell had told the Japanese naval command that American warships would remain in Chinese ports "as long as American citizens are in need of protection or assistance."

The navy issued the following statement:

"The navy department has been informed that Admiral Yarnell (Commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet), informed the senior Japanese naval authorities that the permanent duty of the United States naval vessels is for the protection of American citizens and to go wherever it is necessary at any time to carry out that mission and to remain in such place as long as American citizens are in need of protection or assistance."

The navy said, far from withdrawing the destroyer Pillsbury from the port of Swatow as demanded by the Japanese, the navy had sent another destroyer—the Pope, which has arrived at Swatow. The Pope is a sister ship of the Pillsbury; they are of the world war period.

Foreign Forces Doubled

SHANGHAI, June 22—(AP)—Two American and two British destroyers stood by in Swatow harbor late today despite a Japanese order or suggestion that foreign warships and nationals withdraw from that newly captured South China port.

Foreign naval forces were doubled during the day and, expect for the departure of 20 British women and children, the American and British communities stood pat.

Japanese and occidental accounts deffered as to the nature of the Japanese communication. British naval quarters said foreign ships had been "ordered" to leave Swatow harbor. A Japanese naval spokesman in Shanghai said only "the usual warning" had been given foreigners to leave a zone of possible hostilities.

Reliable informants agreed that Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, and British naval authorities had rejected the Japanese communication, whatever its exact nature. Yarnell on his flagship, the cruiser Augusta, was at Chinwangtao, North China.

The United States destroyer Pillsbury, which remained during yesterday's Japanese occupation to protect 40 Americans at Swatow, still was in the inner harbor and was joined today by the destroyer Pope.

The British destroyer Scout also arrived and anchored in the outer harbor, supporting another British destroyer, the Thanet, which shared yesterday's watch with the Pillsbury.

The Pope brought Captain John T. G. Stapler, commender of the U. S. navy's South China patrol, who had been watching the situation at another Japanese-occidental friction point, Amoy, where the Japanese navy is blockading the international settlement of Julangsu.

The 20 British women and children sailed for Hongkong aboard two British merchantmen. The British colony had totalled 80.

The Japanese spokesman denied any time limit had been attached to the Swatow "warning" which was distributed yesterday to foreign consulates here. However, foreign officials said, it was not received until two hours after the Japanese had announced complete occupation of Swatow and cessation of hostilities there.

American naval reports said Swatow was quiet today.

Senate Approves Tax Revision

Find Purse With Money In Desk

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., June 22—(AP)—Russell H. Harrison bought a used desk the other day from a St. Louis drug supply house.

In cleaning it he discovered a billfold containing $95. He also found cards bearing the name of Kenneth Nichols of Jefferson City, Mo., secretary of the Missouri Pharmaceutical Association.

Harrison wrote Nichols, inquiring if he had lost anything lately. Nichols thought it over a day or two, then telephoned Harrison the description of the billfold. Harrison returned the money.

Politic Whirl As Gov. Leche To Quit Post

Earl K. Long To Be The Governor In Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La., June 22.—(AP)—An unheralded change in Louisiana governors that will elevate Lieutenant Governor Earl K. Long, brother of the late "Kingfish" Huey P. Long, put the state in a political whirl today.

Governor Richard W. Leche announced last night he would resign next week, with nearly 11 months of his term unexpired. As lieutenant governor, Long will succeed automatically.

Although Leche gave ill health—two severe arthritis attacks—as his immediate reason, observers noted the announcement followed days of almost continuous conferences and paralleled a federal investigation of WPA activities in the state.

The fiery, quick-tempered, 43-year-old lieutenant governor, whose career has included staunch support and bitter denunciation of the late Senator Long, immediately rushed to New Orleans for political conferences. He issued a statement he would carry on "the fine work done in the past ten years under my brother, Gov. O. K. Allen and Richard W. Leche."

The unexpected developments threw several ambitious former lieutenants of Huey Long and supporters of his still-intact political machine into dismay since they were preparing to run for Governor next January. As incumbent, Long would hold a distinct advantage.

Two already have announced, one as an outright foe of the administration, and the other as a candidate with or without machine support. The latter, State Treasurer A. P. Tugwell, came out openly two hours before Leche acted.

An ex-traveling salesman like Huey, Earl Long finished law school and held minor political jobs for several years after his brother became governor in 1928. Embittered at Huey's failure to support him for lieutenant governor in 1931 he ran on an opposition ticket, finishing last.

Later the brothers were reconciled, and at the time Huey Long was killed in the capitol in September, 1935, Earl said he was "one of the leaders of the organization." He sat in on the anxious parleys following the killing, emerged as candidate for lieutenant governor, and was easily elected.

House Approves Huge Farm Fund

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(AP)—The house, reversing an earlier decision, joined the senate today in approving a $225,000,000 fund for farm parity payments in addition to the regular $500,000,000 soil conservation benefit fund.

By a roll call vote of 180 to 175, the members adopted a compromise between original agriculture department appropriation bills passed by both chambers which contained the parity fund inserted by the senate.

The house rejected this fund by 13 votes last March.

The members began considering at once a long list of other senate changes in the $1,200,000,000 agriculture department appropriation bill, including $113,000,000 for disposal of surplus commodities.

More Changes In NLRB Rules Being Sought

Critics Of Wagner Act Insistent On Further Revision

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—Revision of Labor Board regulations failed today to satisfy some critics of the Wagner Act, and further changes appeared imminent.

The board's decision to permit employers, like unions, to ask for collective bargaining elections in certain instances brought these developments:

1. Senator Ellender (D-La.) predicted further revision of the board's rules, including a proposal to assure both employers and workers at least 10 months of freedom each year from disputes between unions.

2. Two House members who declined use of their names said the House would be asked to authorize an investigation of the Labor Board, despite the procedural change, with a report next January on proposals for altering the Wagner Act.

3. The AFL renewed its demands for changes in the act. Joseph A. Padway, its general counsel, hailed yesterday's revisionas "an AFL victory," but said the federation wanted all its proposed amendments written into law.

4. CIO leaders made no formal comment, but let it be known they were opposed to the revision.

Submits Proposal

Senator Ellender, an administration supporter on the Senate Labor committee, said he submitted this proposal:

That after a union has established its right to represent a company's employes and has obtained a year's contract with the company, the board should entertain no petitions from a rival union until a short time before the contract expired.

"This would assure at least 10 months of non-intervention by the union which lost," Ellender said.

He predicted the board would announce shortly rules of evidence which attorneys for many business men have advocated.

Besides permitting employers to petition for bargaining elections when two unions in a plant refuse to ask certification as bargaining representatives, the board agreed yesterday to:

Increase from five to ten days the mandatory interim between the issuance of a board complaint and the holding of a hearing;

Require that bonafide unions which are a party to any contract held to violate the Wagner Act must be made parties to any Labor Board proceedings designed to nullify that contract.

These revisions brought commendation from some critics of the Wagner Act and the board, but the approval was coupled with demands that additional modifications be made.

"This is so obviously the right move that it should have been done long before this," said Senator Burke (D-Neb.), adding that he believed Senate hearings on Wagner Act amendments should continue.

Cox Is Critical

At the other end of the capitol, Rep. Cox (D-Ga.) commented:

"This slight change in regulations is not sufficient—it will not save them (the board). It demonstrates no change of attitude."

The proposal for appointment of a House committee to inquire into the Wagner Act's administration probably will come up next week. Both Democratic and Republican leaders have predicted it would be approved by an overwhelming vote.

The AFL disclosed through Padway that it would continue its efforts to replace the present three-man Labor Board with a new five-man agency, to provide definite safeguards for union contracts and craft workers' bargaining units, and to assure court review.

The federation and business organizations championed the proposal to permit employer petitions for board elections. Employers complained they frequently were caught in the middle in rival union disputes.

In letters to Chairman Thomas (DUtah) of the Senate Labor committee and Chairman Norton (D-N.J.) of the House Labor committee, J. Warren Madden, board chairman, said the board was "open minded" on the question when the congressional hearings on Wagner Act amendments began, and was "now convinced that the time has arrived" to make administrative changes.

Truck Bill Dies In The Senate

Defeats Measure On Regulation And Fees Provided

JEFFERSON CITY, June 22.—(AP)—The administration-blessed bus and truck fee bill was an amended-spangled corpse on the the senate floor today.

The upper house decked out the Public Service Commission bus and truck code proposal like a legislative Christmas tree last night—then stripped it of its bewildering raiment and killed it 24 to 6.

The bill, originally designed to place PSC fees and regulations on private, contract and common carriers, was finally beaten after a four-hour wrangle that prompted the veteran Sen. Michael Kinney (D), St. Louis, to remark:

"Some of the gentlemen treat this like a joke. It's no joke. It's about the most serious thing we've had to consider."

And Sen. W. B. Whitlow (D), Fulton, to quip:

"I've been patient through four hours of speeches that seemed only to excite the senators who made them.

"This chamber acts like a bunch of eight-year-olds all daring somebody else to fight but each afraid to hit the first lick. Let's vote on something!"

So the senators voted—and took from the adjournment-bound calendar a measure that had occupied the upper branch in days and days of debate. Observers thought, however, that the bill might be revived with an attempt to reconsider the vote.

As the measure came onto the floor last night its provisions on private carriers and for "reciprocity" fee exemptions with other states already had been stricken. First for consideration, however, was a sweeping amendment by Sen. Phil M. Donnelly (D), Lebanon, which would have re-enacted the present PSC code and added fees to contract carriers, now exempt.

An amendment to Donnelly's amendment, offered by Sen. Dick B. Dale (D), Richmond which would have placed PSC fees on private carriers of three tons and over, pitched the senate into an hour and a half debate on a technical point of order which finally was withdrawn. From then on all the 13 amendments proposed to the Donnelly plan were adopted.

In the course of the wearing session the senate once became so involved it tentatively approved two different sets of fee classifications for private haulers, restored the "reciprocity" and generally muddled Donnelly's proposal to the point where he finally remarked:

"Mr. President. I don't think this amendment is any credit to this body in the shape it is now in. I ask permission to withdraw it. If it came to a vote I would have to vote against my own amendment now."

With the amendment out of the way, Sen. Allen McReynolds called for a vote on the bill proper and it was beaten.

About $800,000 of the $1,500,000 annual additional revenue sought by the highway department was provided for last week in a senate-passed bill doubling license plate charges on all trucks except those under one ton. That bill now is in the house awaiting action on minor senate amendments.

However, the companion measure which was defeated last night had been intended to bring in the remainder of the needed revenue through the proposed PSC truck fees.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 22—(AP)—The Searcy three-cent gasoline tax—battle scarred veteran of this long session—was approved for passage today by the senate highway committee.

One of the first measures introduced in the assembly, It reached the floor only three days before adjournment—boosted out as a direct result of last night's senate defeat of the bus and truck fee bill.

The house-approved Searcy bill would add a penny to the state gasoline tax and cut in half the price of passenger car license plates. Backers contend it would bring $2,000,000 a year more revenue to the state's highdays.

Big Spender Hopes To Retire Coming Month

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(AP)—One of the biggest spenders in the United States—Rear Admiral Christian Joy Peoples, who wants to retire next month—appears to be a man who looks at a dollar a long time before he lets it go.

The head of the treasury's procurement division has a reputation for being close-fisted. Yet he has been the virtual purchasing agent of a government that spends about $8,000,000,000 a year.

As the nation's biggest buyer, the quiet, cold-eyed, thin-lipped native of Creston, Iowa, has bought just about everything from beans to office buildings.

The Public Health Service wanted some skeletons. Admiral Peoples got them.

Time was when the government's skeleton market was Germany. But the admiral changed that. He buys American skeletons. Incidentally, he pays from $100 to $200 for them, depending on market conditions.

The biggest bulk-buying he ever did probably was the cement for Grand Coulee dam. The procurement division bought 5,800,000 barrels of it.

The largest single object? A nine-story office building in Chicago. The admiral has also purchased several railroad locomotives.

Smallest? His aides had to dig down deep for this one. Excluding pine—which are bought in big batches—the smallest purchase was a dozen collars for some guinea pigs.

Things have to meet specifications, too.

After the procurement division bought a traveling clinic to be used chiefly in bumping along the southern cottonfield country, the finished product had to be returned. The government's buyer decided that some of the women who work in cottonfields are exceptionally broad. The door was too narrow for them. So the clinic went back for alterations.

Under Admiral Peoples the government changed its policy on buying American flags. Most of them used to come from a foreign country, but now they are American made. This has made the admiral very happy.

Views Of Weir Expressed On Steel Industry

Advances 'Sound Common Sense' To Reap Profits

By Marben Graham

PITTSBURGH, June 22—(AP)—Ernest T. Weir today charged the managements of big steel corporations with the "principal responsibility" for the industry's nine year losing streak and advanced as a solution what he termed a "simple formula of sound common sense."

"Fundamentally there is nothing wrong with our business," explained the recently elected head of the American Iron and Steel Institute, replying to a request for his analysis of the industry's ailments.

"It is principally management that is responsible for our plight. Not politics. Not economics. Not high labor costs. As I've said before I'm against reducing wages.

"I maintain that if the management of any company is conducted in a sound way it will make profits even at low levels of operation. And there is nothing mysterious about 'sound way.' The only way to make a profit is to sell at a price higher than cost."

Weir's indictment of managements—he cited later the figures from the nine largest concerns as a specific instance—came as the third blast by a prominent independent operator since a series of slashings several months ago set the industry a-jitter.

"Independents" is the term used by steel men in reference to concerns other than units of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Claim Prices Too Low

Tom Girdler, head of the Republic Steel Corporation, Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem, and Weir himself, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, all have declared steel prices now are too low.

Weir drew from his big flat-topped desk the latest financial figures on steel. The quiet, plush-carpeted skyscraper office must often be a pleasant reminder by its contrast to the man who came up the "hard way" from humble office boy to organizer and head of America's fifth largest steel corporation.

The figures showed the nine largest companies producing more than 80 per cent of the steel dollars in the past nine years; output, had borrowed 512 million spent a billion, 151 million in new construction, and reported a net loss of 89 million.

Turning to the general competitive situation, Weir said he believed all companies today were virtually equal from a production cost standpoint. He said also the equalization of prices at the main basing points inauguarated a year ago by U. S. Steel had made "absolutely no difference" in the competitive picture.

"We don't need any government interference," Weir insisted, "and there is no necessity for industry-wide controls or cartels now common in Europe.

"I'm still an individualist. And there is nothing to prevent any company from making a fair profit if it merchandises with intelligence."

Yost Passes 50-Year Mark On Globe

Editorial Chief Once Lived Here; Started Work Early

ST. LOUIS, June 22—Casper S. Yost, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat's editorial page, and a former Sedalian, last night celebrated completion of his 50th year with the newspaper.

Yost, for 64 of his 72 years, has worked on and about newspapers, having started his career at the age of 8, setting type for a weekly at Lebanon, Mo. He was born in Sedalia, on July 1, 1864, and was educated in Richland and Lebanon.

His journalistic career began on the Laclede County Leader, at Lebanon, where, at the age of eight, he set type, standing on a chair to reach the type case.

Yost was founder of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, and was president of the organization from 1922 to 1926. In his spare time, he has written half a dozen books.

During the World war, his editorials bespeaking the support of the Wilson administration were a significant factor in maintaining the solidarity of the nation.

Big Shoe Concern Into Bankruptcy

ST. LOUIS, June 22—(AP)—The Hamilton-Brown Shoe company, once the largest manufacturer of shoes in America, was adjudicated a bankrupt today by Federal Judge George H. Moore.

The 56-year-old concern formally went out of existence at 10:25 a. m. when Judge Moore signed a bankruptcy order prepared by Charles P. Williams, attorney for federal court trustees who had operated the company since last April 18.

Judge Moore ordered the trustees: James K. Vardaman, Jr., and John W. Lake, to continue in charge of the assets until the creditors have had time to elect a trustee, which is the procedure under the amended bankruptcy act.

The company last April 17 had filed a petition for reorganization, but inability to raise fresh capital led the trustees and the firm's directors to recommend liquidation.

The case was referred by the court to Referee in Bankruptcy Elmer E. Pearcy, who will set a date for the filing of claims by creditors. Judge Moore retained jurisdiction as to costs, fees and expenses in connection with the attempted reorganization.

An estimate that creditors may receive half of their claims and that 800 stockholders will probably be paid nothing on their 200,000 shares of stock was made by one of the trustees. It was expected that between $600,000 and $800,000 would be realized in the liquidation.

Injuries In Car Accident Fatal

Mrs. John Laister, aged about 70, of Montrose, Mo., died at 1:25 o'clock Wednesday morning in the General hospital, Windsor, of injuries suffered Tuesday night in an automobile wreck, which occurred on highway 52, south of Green Ridge.

Mrs. Laister. with Maurine Fewell, Lubbock, Texas, and B. C. Welch, Petersburg, Texas, was returning to her home from Marshall, Mo., where she had attended an all-day church meeting.

The car skidded on the wet loose gravel, and struck the side of a bridge. Mrs. Laister suffered a fractured skull and crushed chest. Miss Fewell and Mr. Welch received only minor injuries.

Proposal For A $3,860,000,000 Program Made

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—President Roosevelt proposed to congress today a $3,860,000,000 program for stimulating business through self-liquidating projects and low cost housing developments.

The president estimated that at least $870,000,000 would be disbursed in federal loans during the year starting July 1. The remainder of the program, split into six types of self-liquidating projects, would continue for from two to seven years.

The president said that in the long run the program would not cost the taxpayers a cent so far as self-liquidating projects were concerned.

He outlined his proposals in a letter to Chairman Byrnes (D-SC) of the senate unemployment committee, and sent copies to other senate and house leaders.

Self Liquidating Projects

Mr. Roosevelt explained that there would be a limit on the self liquidating projects of $3,060,000,000 over the two to seven years period which their construction would embrace and that as money came in from loans it would be put out again as needed to stimulate employment and business.

Another $800,000,000 would be added to the borrowing capacity of the United States housing authority, under the president's plan.

Mr. Roosevelt said he could not state how much of this would be used in the next fiscal year but that the money would be applied to providing low cost homes for persons with incomes in the $1,250 to $2,000 class. These are not covered by either the present slum clearance program or the FHA operations, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Meanwhile, at the capitol Senator Mead (D-NY) said he had support of Secretaries Morgenthau and Hopkins for "the general principle" of his bill to provide government backing for loans to small business.

He declared Hopkins probably would testify shortly before the senate banking subcommittee considering the Mead bill "and suggest some amendments."

The Mead bill calls for insurance by the RFC of up to 90 per cent of bank loans to small and medium-sized business.

Mead said he had discussed the insured loans bill with Morgenthau and the treasury head "did not come out flat-footed for it but indicated he favored my proposals."

Six Groups Proposed

President Roosevelt divided his proposed self-liquidating projects into these six groups:

First, Under the new federal works agency, loans would be made for such self liquidating projects as water works, sewage disposal plants, bridges and hospitals.

The ceiling for this group, Mr. Roosevelt said, is $3[illegible],000,000 and the government would put out $150,000,000 in the first year—starting July 1. The program would last two years.

Second, under the bureau of public roads would be construction projects for post roads, toll roads, bridges, high speed highways, and city by-passes, with a four-year ceiling of $750,000,000 and an outlay of $150,000,000 in the 1940 fiscal year.

Third, railroad equipment projects. The president said he believed it would be better for the government to create an authority to lease equipment to the carriers, with the government retaining title to it. He proposed a $500,000,000 ceiling and the use of $100,000,000 in 1940.

Fourth, Under the agriculture department, rural electrification would be expanded to reach at least 1,250,000 rural families, about 5,000,000 people, not now receiving electricity and not likely to in the near future. A seven year's program with a $460,000,000 ceiling was suggested with an outlay of only $20,000,000 in 1940.

Fifth, Under the farm security administration, expansion of the purchase of farms for tenant farmers with a $500,000,000 limit and loans of $250,000,000 in 1940.

Sixth, Foreign loans to promote American foreign trade were put down for $500,000,000 for two years with $200,000,000 going out in 1940.

Mr. Roosevelt explained proceeds of these loans would be spent in the United States and would be used for development and reconstruction purposes in the foreign country.

The president's letter to Byrnes was in reply to one in which Byrnes requested the president to advise him what effect transfer of money from WPA to PWA would have upon employment.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he thought the program he was outlining was a much better way of approaching the problem of work projects.

Streets Can Be Made Safer — If We Will

Many and many a city has conducted sporadic traffic drives to try to cut down the terrible toll in dead and wounded that automobiles are taking every day.

And many of them wound up at the end of 1937 to find, to their surprise and horror, the toll was higher than it had been the year before, despite all the campaigns and viewings with alarm.

But a few other cities got a different answer, and it is worth while to inquire why. Beaumont, Tex., furnishes one of the most heartening examples of what can be done by a community that really wants to do something about the problem.

At the close of 1936 Beaumont was fourth from the top of the list of "killer" cities.

Its people were ashamed and alarmed. They decided to do something about it.

At the end of 1937, Beaumont had cut off a larger percentage of its traffic toll than any other city in the country. Accidents had been cut 62.8 per cent, from 881 to 341. Injuries had been cut 20.9 per cent, from 254 to 201. Deaths had been cut 72.7 per cent, from 22 to six.

That is a record of which any city might be proud, but the best thing about it is that no trick methods were employed, no special machinery or facilities used that are not equally available to any other city.

A Safety League was organized, and 7000 individuals signed up. A monster parade opened the campaigns, and support was enlisted from practically every organization in town.

Three lines of attack were launched at once, all co-ordinated under direction of the Safety League. The first was a giant publicity campaign in which the newspapers played a leading role, but in which nearly 100,000 pieces of printed matter were distributed, and radio, movies, pictures and posters used.

There were engineering studies and improvements in signals, signs, elimination of traffic hazards, and the whole mechanical side of safety.

The police eliminated ticket-fixing, operated a sound truck, specially investigated causes of accidents.

None of these things is new. Most cities have tried one or all of them. But where Beaumont excelled was, first, in rallying exceptional public support, and, second, in pressing the campaign without a let-up through the entire year. The two-week campaign that has every motorist on his toes and then is forgotten had no place in the Beaumont picture.

It can be done—this job of cutting down accidents. And it doesn't take any fantastic or expert measures. What it does take is what Beaumont gave it and what any city can give it. That is widespread determination to cut the toll, and the determination never to let up a minute until results are obtained.

Science Shouts

Science has been speaking for some time, but with the announcement that a new process has been developed to make tough beefsteak tender, it shouts. This is one time that science has said a mouthful.

This process consists of hanging the meat in temperatures higher than are usually used, and killing off the resulting bacteria with ultra-violet radiations. Every grade of beef, it is believed, can be raised approximately one full grade in palatability.

A good many of the developments of science, while they benefit the average man indirectly, are too remote for him to see just where they come in. But this one, getting right down to the evening dinner table, will cause a swelling chorus from 40,000,000 dinner tables: "Good old science!"

Three years of research by the Mellon Institute went into this discovery. Maybe after many years, Andrew Mellon will be remembered not as the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton, but as the man who took the beefs out of beefsteak.

Barter With Athletes

During his six years as secretary of state, Cordell Hull has become known throughout the world for his "Yankee trading" policies. He has struck up reciprocal agreements with almost a score of nations and even some Republicans have handed him an occasional verbal bouquet for his efforts.

But it now appears that if Mr. Hull is going to compete with the totalitarian governments he will have to include in his bargain bag other items than soy beans and saddle soap, power pumps and paper products.

Italy, in its barter quest for coffee, has found a source of supply in Brazil. But Brazil is demanding in return not olive oil or wine, but a football player.

If that's the kind of twist future international trading takes, the United States will hold a full hand of athletes as well as natural resources.

And despite Congress' disapproval, Mr. Roosevelt might get that Argentine canned beef for the Navy after all. He could just ship them an Annapolis fullback.

Unconventional Ending

In the movie land of make-believe, the pretty but penniless young girl who seeks fame and fortune in Hollywood somehow always manages to wind up as a success.

How different the men and women of the films are off the lot and what fate awaits 95 per cent of the histrionic hopefuls is brought home in the story of Marie Rogers, deep-eyed Montana brunet of 19 who sought a career in the cinema.

Without funds or experience, Marie stopped at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cartwright, who have known Hollywood long enough not to have any illusions. They advised her to return home.

Then they introduced her to Lois Wilson, an actress whose counsel is based on 15 years of stage and screen experience.

"No girl should try to start a Hollywood career without an independent income and a family to live with," she told Marie.

Marie now is back home in Montana, striving harder than ever to save enough to return to Hollywood—this time with sufficient funds and with her mother.

Whether she wins movie fame or marries before she gets another chance, Marie Rogers will thank Miss Wilson and the Cartwrights a thousand times during her life for their sound advice.

This Week In Missouri History

Colonel John Knapp, Journalist
Business Manager of the Missouri Republican

As business manager for thirty years of one of Missouri's great newspapers, The Missouri Republican, Colonel John Knapp made it one of the most valuable pieces of newspaper property in the middle west. Under his direction the paper came to exert a profound influence on the politics of the State and the nation.

Born in New York on June 20, 1816, one hundred and twenty-three years ago this week, Knapp was brought to St. Louis by his parents when he was only four years old. His father died in 1823, and two years later he began working for his board on a farm near Bluffdale, Illinois. Not until he was fifteen years old did he return to the city, where he became an apprentice in the tailoring shop of Samuel Willi.

The phase of John Knepp's life that is most widely known, his newspaper career, began in 1854, when he purchased an interest in the Missouri Republican and took charge of the business office. Under his supervision the circulation of the paper immediately began to increase. Within two years the advertising patronage had doubled. The introduction of the blanket-sheet, an eleven column page twenty-seven inches wide and thirty-two inches long, made the Republican the largest paper west of the Alleganies and with two exceptions larger than any eastern paper. The circulation and advertising revenue soon surpassed that of any previous newspaper in St. Louis.

Under the business management of John Knapp and the editorial policy of George Knapp, his brother, and Nathanial Paschall, the Republican soon became a power in national politics. It aligned the State against secession in the national election of 1860, did much to check the secession plans of Governor Claiborne F. Jackson, and helped in overcoming the personal influence of Senator James S. Green. It opposed the capture of Camp Jackson, but never wavered in its support of the national government, and did much to hold Missouri in the Union.

The Missouri Republican was the successor of the Gazette, the first newspaper established west of the Mississippi river. It became the St. Louis Republic in 1888, which in turn was absorbed by the present St. Louis Globe-Democrt on December 4, 1919.

John Knapp owed his military title of "colonel" to a long and active service in the militia of Missouri. Starting as a private in 1840 he remained in the service of the State for more than a quarter of a century. He fought with the volunteer forces in Mexico and was in command of the First Regiment of Missouri Militia on the Missouri-Kansas border in 1960. After the break between the Union and southern forces in Missouri he was appointed a colonel in the 8th regiment of the Enrolled Missouri Militia and later colonel of the 13th Provisional Regiment. As an aid to Willard P. Hall he went with a brigade of Missouri troops in pursuit of Gen. Sterling Price when the latter invaded the State in 1864. Newspapers proclaimed Knapp one of the best tacticians in the volunteer service of his day.

Although Knapp was never an office-seeking politician he was always a force in public life. Through his activities as the business manager of a large newspaper and his work in the State militia, he made numerous friends and became influential in the political life of St. Louis and the State. Col John Knapp died at his home in St. Louis on November 12, 1888.

Swift Entertains Judging Champs

Sedalia and Pettis County can justly be proud of the 4-H poultry judging team which won first place in a state wide contest.

These boys and girls, Ruth Rose of La Monte, Mo., Ruth Romig, Elizabeth and Walter McClure of Sedalia, Mo., have worked earnestly to win this award which entitles them to a trip to Cleveland between July 28 and August 7. The World's Poultry Congress will be held at Cleveland at that time, and poultry raisers from all over the world will attend this show which is costing in the neighborhood of one million dollars.

Swift and Company Friday evening entertained these boys and girls along with Mrs. W. P. Tucker, Clyde Ferguson, J. U. Morris and W. J. Murphy at the Bothwell Hotel for supper. The party then attended the Liberty Theatre.

Each of these boys and girls are participating in Swift's Baby Chick Project, having received 50 baby chicks which they will raise to maturity in competition with 153 other boys and girls. Sometime in September Swift and Company will sponsor a 4-H poultry show and medals and prizes will be awarded winners.

These boys and girls worked diligently to win this honor, making several visits to Swift and Company's plant where Swift's hatcheryman, Arden Mowrer, gave them strict schooling in poultry judging. Mrs. Tucker and Mr. Ferguson worked earnestly in schooling these boys and girls and were very patient in their work.

C. S. Kurtz, manager of Swift and Company, stated that now the major part of the task remains in that boys and girls from 48 states will compete for national honors at Cleveland, and he stated that Swift and Company is going to assist in giving the boys and girls further training to help them bring national honors to Pettis County.

Roach was a former president of the Missouri Press Association and was in charge of publicity for the state Democratic campaign in 1932.

He was born at Jerseyville, Ill., and was a teacher in his early years. He is survived by his wife who has been in charge of the paper in recent months.

He was a cousin of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Bahner Girl Bitten By Unseen Snake

Miss Mary Catherine Myer of Bahner, suffering from a bite inflicted recently by an unseen snake, is still confined to her bed, but her condition is considered improved.

Miss Myer was picking beans in the garden at her home last week when she suddenly felt a pain in her left hand. At first she thought she had been stung by a bee, but a doctor called to treat the wound said that in his opinion she had been bitten by a snake.

However, Miss Myer had not seen a snake in the garden, and was surprised to know that she had been attacked by one.

Library Reports For 1938 And 1939 Show Progress

The annual reports on the Sedalia Public Library has been submitted for 1938-1939 and President Lee Montgomery in his report announces steady progress.

It says:

"Although the past year's work of the library has involved no new and striking features, it has nevertheless shown a healthy progress toward the realization of the objectives which the library was designed to promote.

"Our circulation of books has shown an increase in spite of the fact that our circulation in the city schools fell off 5,644 volumes, due to the fact that the School Board has supplied this demand by placing selections of books in each of the grade schools of the city. We might justly add this figure to our total gain of 2,633 as indicating an actual increase of circulation of 8,277 volumes for the year.

"Furthermore, the value and use of the library in promoting various educational and cultural activities of our community has shown the same steady growth. It is now more than ever the center where research is stimulated, guided and conducted—research suggested by the schools and individual research of citizens not in schools but in quest of the answers to their problems, practical, intellectual or artistic. Our industrious and well-qualified staff has rendered constant help to inquirers of all classes and ages. The expansion of this service to the people has made the library an ever-growing asset to the city.

"That the library is an effective educational center and force is also shown by the growing use of its facilities for meetings of classes, clubs and study groups to study or discuss subjects of a literary or artistic nature and by the exhibits of various forms of artistic work which have from time to time been made.

"Owing to the great shrinkage in the collection of taxes during the past few years and the pressing need of other city departments for revenue, the Board has made every effort to conduct the affairs of the library as economically as it compatible with its efficiency. While our income has been less than it formerly was and our library staff is not as large as it should be and its members are not as well paid as they should be, the Library Board has deemed it to be its duty to adjust its expenditures to the needs of the other departments of the city. We, of course, earnestly hope that the time may soon come when more funds may be available to us and our usefulness to the community may be correspondingly greater.

"The library board and the library staff are groups of people who give careful attention to their duties and responsibilities and who work harmoniously together to achieve the best possible results with the means at hand."

Few Books Lost

The report of Mrs. Grace Young, librarian, shows circulation continues to increase each year. Last year 2,633 more volumes were issued to borrowers than the previous year, nearly half of this increase being from the main library. All departments of the system showed a considerable increase except the city schools. Their circulation decreased 5,644. This was due, no doubt, to the fact that the Board of Education placed collections of new books in each of the grade schools.

It is interesting to note that we circulated 10,818 magazines during the year.

Of the 156 periodicals and newspapers received forty-nine are gifts from individuals, organizationhs and publishers.

1,095 volumes were withdrawn. Of this number only forty-four were lost, the others being discarded because worn out.

Ten new titles were added to the reference collection on the subjects of art, music, biology, science, law, book of quotations and an atlas.

The staff was kept busy during the school year with reference work with the high school students. Much reference work was done, as usual, for club papers and many questions answered over the phone.

WPA classes have met at the library during the winter as well as other WPA projects that have been carried on during the year.

Various clubs have held meetings in the library, and there have been the usual committee meetings.

The library observed Book Week with displays of new and attractive books. The building was decorated during the holidays in keeping with the season. The Camera Club held two exhibits, Miss Ruth Fults had her own paintings on display for three weeks. Broadway school sponsored an exhibit of prints which attracted many of the school children.

The library has been well remembered with gifts of books, magazines and with many beautiful flowers which help to make the place attractive.

The Sedalia newspapers have shown their cooperation in their willingness to publish items of interest pertaining to the library and in their gifts of their papers.

Rearmament For United States Is Speeded Up

Air, Sea And Land Equipment And Men Increased

By Edward E. Bomar

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—For the first time in history, the United States has formed a fairly definite idea of what arms the nation needs for security and has set about swiftly to forge them.

In marked contrast with early world war days, the reinforcement of land, sea and air forces which congress has authorized is moving ahead with an apparent speed and smoothness alien to past American experience.

Five months after President Roosevelt first sought a special $552,000,000 fund chiefly to treble the army air corps, some 850 warplanes actually are being riveted.

Several hundred college youths, the first of 20,000 to be trained annually, have learned the rudiments of flying.

The war departments is getting contracts ready for guns, tanks and other land weapons to cost $150,000,000.

To speed further its warship construction, the navy has cleared away weeks sooner than usual the preliminaries toward starting four new submarines and four destroyers.

America's "two year plan," from all indications, is well up to schedule. By July 1, the start of a new fiscal year, when normally new undertakings are started, it should be in full blast.

The bulk of appropriations expected to approach $2,000,000,000 before congress adjourns becomes available then.

The absence of confusion, high administration officials say, is due chiefly to the fact that the job has been turned over to professionals. President Roosevelt and congress have given the army and navy virtually a free hand to carry out plans that in some instances were made years ago.

Army and Navy Buildup

The army's blueprints for an air force of more than 5,500 planes, reinforcement of the Panama canal and procurement of full war equipment for an "initial protective force" of 400,000 were ready in outline weeks before the Munich peace of last September dramatized world war fears.

The navy, accustomed to thinking years in advance because of the time required to build ships, had its expansion projected long before congress last year voted a billion-dollar increase in fleet tonnage.

How the greatest peace time arms program was made ready without fanfare may be considered a secret no longer since congress gave its approval with scarcely a murmur of opposition.

His advisers say Mr. Roosevelt decided late in 1937 that Germany's amazingly rapid expansion of air power and the explosive world situation made it imperative that the air corps be built up and land forces strengthened.

The army had to wait, however, since the navy's fleet proposal took precedence.

In the meantime preliminaries were cleared away. The war department general staff went to work last June to report in detail just what the high command considered essential. By November, just after Munich and two months before Mr. Roosevelt submitted his request for the extraordinary arms fund on January 12, numerous contracts with plane manufacturers were actually written in anticipation of congressional approval.

The chief executive, official circles heard, favored at first an American air force even larger than the fleet of 10,000 warplanes that became a tentative objective.

Advance Work

The advance work showed results in April when forceful Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, signed orders for the first planes and equipment within a few hours after the initial $50,000,000 was made available.

In shaping his recommendations, Mr. Roosevelt leaned heavily for advice on a quartet consisting of Johnson, Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, General Malin Craig, army chief of staff, and Admiral William D. Leahy, naval chief of operations.

That the titular assistants were summoned repeatedly to the white house, rather than Secretaries Woodring and Swanson, was due at least partly to their official positions. The procurement of munitions is their special province, and just now arms rather than men is the principal concern.

With rearmament actually started, coordination is a matter for official boards with the chief executive a court of last resort in any dispute between the army and navy.

Three such agencies smooth out differences and prevent overlapping. The joint board, concerned with general plans and policies, is made up of General Craig, Admiral Leahy and top officers of both services.

Overshadowing it for the time being is the army and navy munitions board, consisting of Johnson and Edison and officers concerned with obtaining from government arsenals, gun factories and commercial plants the weapons and supplies both services require.

A third group, the aeronautical board, is made up of Major General Henry H. Arnold, air corps chief, Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the navy's aeronautics bureau, and their assistants.

Topping them all is the council of national defense, a world war relic, made up of six cabinet members, but it has not actually functioned.

Evidences of friction between the army and navy high commands have bobbed up at intervals, but by all indications Mr. Roosevelt is not convinced they warrant radical new measures of coordination.

Reject New Agency

He has rejected as unnecessary suggestions that a new agency be created to exercise a general oversight of munitions like the war industries board of 1917-18, headed by Bernard M. Baruch.

Similarly thumbs were turned down on proposals for a single department of national defense, and for a single air force.

Two years hence, barring unforseen tangles, the nation will be incomparably better armed against the possibility of war than in any other time of peace.

All plans aim at readiness for "M-Day" — the army's term for the outbreak of war — without keeping the country in Eourope's perpetual state of mobilization.

This, in summary, will be the state of the armed forces by mid-1941, on the basis of estimates to congress:

Army — About 205,000 enlisted men — a 40,000 increase — and 16,719 officers; 210,000 national guardsmen; 100,000 organized reserve officers; reserve of 50,000 former enlisted men.

Full war equipment for the initial protective force of about 400,000 made up of the regulars and guardsmen, and partial equipment to expand the force to 1,000,000 in three months.

In relative size, the American army is expected to remain about seventeenth, but should be vastly superior to all but a few in weapons and training.

Air Corps — 4,663 officers, regulars and reservists on active duty, and 44,537 enlisted men; 5,500 to 6,000 planes, tripling the present force; a half dozen new major air bases, substantially bolstering defenses particularly of the Atlantic coast and the Panama canal.

Navy — A fleet of more than 400 warcraft, more than 200 modern and comparatively new, these including some 60 of the 74 ships now under construction, and rivalled in might only by Great Britain's.

The first of eight new battleships already on the ways or about to be started expected then to be ready within a few months to reinforce the existing 15 capital craft.

About 120,000 enlisted men — 10,000 increase — and 72,000 officers. Strengthened by the addition of a dozen new bases for surface and air craft in the Pacific, Alaska, the Caribbean and on both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts.

Air force — Already rated the world's strongest aerial fleet auxiliary, expected to number about 2,500 planes.

Industry — Capacity of 1,000 or more planes a month. For production of munitions, 10,000 plants assigned definite war tanks, 250 trained to turn out particularly vital items by means of trial or "educational" orders.

Former Ladies of GAR Head Speaks Here

Mrs. Eunice Rash of Thayer, Kas., state president of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic for Kansas in 1929-30, and now grand chaplain and national committee member on patriotic literature, addressed the local Charles M. Koock Circle at the home of Mrs. Mary Kelly, 2001 East Fifteenth street, last week. She spoke on "The Needs, Purposes and Beauty of the Order," citing to the membership that this organization was one of the pillars maintaining constitutional government.

Democracy, she said, is an inheritance from the past, held in trust for the present, to be passed on in trust to the future.

This order, she added, promotes the teaching of patriotism, obedience to laws, loyalty to country, and proposes to keep forever sacred the memory of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Council Will Call Election For July 11

City Will Vote On Franchise Renewal For Light Company

By a vote of seven to one the city county Monday night decided to call a special election on July 11, to vote on a renewal of the City Light and Traction Company's franchise to sell electricity in the city of Sedalia.

After the ordinance had been read for the third time Mayor Julian H. Bagby before putting it to a vote, asked if any one wanted to discuss it.

Walter Pinkepank, third ward alderman moved that the ordinance be tabled. He said that he understood some people were meeting and discussing the matter and that nothing was said relative to a reduction of electrical rates.

Summers Against Tabling

"I wonder if there is a move on to play politics, and not give the people a chance to vote on this," said Elmer Sumners, second ward alderman, adding that he did not think the ordinance should be tabled.

"I think this should be put to a vote of the people," said E. H. McLaughlin, first ward alderman, "and later if the earnings of the company are more than they should be we can go to the public service commission and ask for a reduction. I think Mr. Pinkepank is getting the cart before the horse."

"To table this now would be out of line and out of order," said A. J. Knipp, third ward alderman. "The people are entitled to an opportunity to vote on this and it shouldn't have the smell of politics."

Mr. Pinkepank did not have a second to his motion to table. Therefore the ordinance was put to a vote, and passed with the one negative vote.

Judges and clerks for the election, which will be held in four wards of the city, were named as follows:

Judges And Clerks

First ward, Judges: Mrs. Richard Rohn, William E. Seelen, Harry Dobel, John W. Finley, J. Ross Kindred and Ida J. Moore. Clerks: Mrs. D. K. Scruton, William Hart, William Schrader and Mrs. Stuart King.

Second ward, Judges: Elmer Swope, Otis Howe, Ada Woolery, Mrs. W. A. Campbell, Alice Burnett and Marvin Mayo. Clerks: Mrs. Champ Shepherd, Dorothy Jones, May Keenan and J. R. Moffitt.

Third ward, Judges: Mrs. John Devine, Mrs. F. O. Withers, Mrs. Clarence Harrell, Mrs. Chris Rau, Mrs. Ruth Woody and W. H. Smith. Clerks: Mrs. R. L. Lawson, Mrs. F. M. Ross, Fred Harding and Mrs. E. L. Zoellig.

Fourth ward, Judges: Mrs. Harry Harnsberger, Will P. Hurley, Dan M. Carr, Guy Peabody, E. H. Weinrich and Richard Battles. Clerks: Mrs. Walker Boulware, Mrs. Ruth Sullivan, Mrs. G. A. Widder and Mrs. Susie Benz.

Amend Zoning Ordinance

By a unanimous vote the aldermen amended the zoning ordinance changing the property on the northeast corner of Broadway and State Fair boulevard from residence to business property. This was done to permit Albert Droehlich and brother to erect a radio station there. Permission to grant the change had previously been given by the zoning commission.

The street and alley department of the city was granted permission to purchase asphalt in a carload lot, rather than in smaller quantities.

Mrs. F. L. Garst, 118 West Broadway, was granted permit to sell 3.2 per cent beer.

Some changes were proposed for the milk ordinance. They will be presented for further consideration at the next meeting.

Mrs. Thelma Barnes was appointed a member of the board of registrars, representing the second ward. She succeeds Mrs. L. R. Butcher, who has moved to another ward.

Plan Wrecking On Site Of Park

ST. LOUIS, June 20—(AP)—Plans for wrecking buildings to make way for the gigantic Jefferson Memorial park here are being prepared, John L. Nagle, superintendent of the National Park Service in charge of the project, said today.

The federal government took title yesterday to the entire forty city blocks in the river front district after payment into United States district court of $1,782,884 for the final 13 blocks.

The payment brought the total to $5,970,970 for the site, compared with $6,984,975 in damage awards by the condemnation commissioners.

Only about 65 per cent of the "declarations of taking" made through payments in court registry are by agreement with the individual property owners. The remaining owners may contest the government appraisals on which their compensation is based.

Keys Necessary To Help Escape

MARYSVILLE, O., June 20.—(AP)—A deepening mystery, revolving around a couple of keys, confronted authorities today as they sought to learn how Mrs. Velma West, husband-slayer of the flapper era, and three other inmates escaped from the state reformatory for women "for one little adventure."

"They had to have keys to get out, but no keys are missing," exclaimed Mrs. Marguerite Reilley, superintendent of the institution, shortly after she ordered three women sent to correction cells "until they tell me what they know."

Mrs. Reilley said the three placed in correction cells, whom she refused to identify, slept in a corridor through which Mrs. West, 33-year-old women from Painesville, O., slipped to freedom with the other inmates early yesterday.

"They insist they know nothing about it," the superintendent said, "but I think they do."

To make their escape, Mrs. West and her companions had to unlock doors to their cells and a door leading from the cell blocks in which they were confined.. The reformatory yard was open.

Fleeing with Mrs. West were Virginia Brawdy, 19, of Akron, O., sentenced as an incorrigible; Florence Sheline, 23, of Gallipolis, O., convicted of breaking and entering; and Mary Ellen Richards, 23, of Cincinnati, sentenced for robbery.

Adventure Desired

In a three page-note left for Mrs. Reilley, Mrs. West complained of "pain in this body of mine—."

"I don't know how to tell you just how I feel—I am being torn two different ways—my desire to not hurt you and my folks whom I love—and my desire to have just one little adventure before I get too old and too dulled by pain to ever enjoy life," the note said.

After reading the note, Mrs. Reilley commented:

"With her health so bad, I dont' see how Velma can feel like having any fling."

Mrs. West pleaded guilty to second degree murder and was sentenced to serve from five years to life imprisonment. She confessed she beat to death her husband, Thomas Edward West, December 7, 1927, when he refused to accompany her to a party. After clubbing him, Velma went to the party in Cleveland.

West was the 26-year-old son of a nationally known nurseryman of Perry, O.

KANSAS CITY, June 19—(AP)—Five persons drowned while excessive heat gripped Missouri over the weekend, and a sixth life was claimed in a storm which accompanied the arrival of cooler temperatures last night.

John Nielsen, about 65, was killed in a windstorm which struck a farm on which he was employed 2½ miles northwest of Tarkio last night. He was pinned beneath two beams when a barn was demolished by the wind.

John J. Heilman, 16, of Murphysburro, Ill., drowned in the Gasconade River near Rolla Sunday.

Near Warsaw, Mo., Oliver Osburn, 6, of Independence, Mo., drowned in Turkey Creek.

The body of Jack Fair, 15, of Denver, was found yesterday in the Osage River near Osceola. He disappeared Saturday.

Milk Thieves Have Narrow Escape

An unknown boy and girl who were stealing milk from a cow were nearly caught red-handed by the owner, James Paxton, late Monday afternoon when he discovered them, as he was on his way to get the animal.

Paxton, who lives near Twenty-fourth street and Engineer avenue chased the two but was unable to catch them.

However, the thieves did not get to use the milk, as Paxton found they had thrown the pail into a small creek branch.

The cow, that didn't want to be milked, received several bad cuts from the barbed wire fence where it was cornered.

City Is Paid $9,387.57 On Dugan Bond

Bondsmen Make Good Shortage By Former Collector

Three bondsmen for T. E. Dugan, former city collector, Monday paid representatives of the city of Sedalia a total of $9,387.57, making good money embezzled by Dugan while he was in office.

The bondsmen for Dugan, who is now serving a six-year sentence in the state penitentiary, were his father, E. W. Dugan; his brother, Georg Dugan; Dr. C. A. McNeil, and H. W. Mason. The checks were from George Dugan, Dr. McNeil and Mason, who shared equally in meeting the shortage. In addition, they will pay approximately $230 in court costs, incurred while they were protesting the legality of the bond.

Payment on the bond was the result of a decision in the circuit court of Polk county at Bolivar recently, when the court found that Dugan's bond was binding on his bondsmen. They had protested payment and alleged the bond had been altered and two words interlineated and the city then filed suit to collect the bond. The bondsmen filed motion for a new trial, but that was over-ruled. No further appeal was taken.

In January, 1936, Dugan admitted he had incurred a shortage of city funds while in office. He also confessed to staging a fake holdup and fire to cover up the embezzlement. He pleaded guilty to embezzlement charges in the circuit court here and was sentenced to the penitentiary.

Propose Loans To Buy Farms

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(AP)—The senate agricultural committee approved today a bill under which the federal government could underwrite $350,000,000 of private loans for the purchase of farms.

The bill, by Senator Lee (D-Okla), would apply to farm purchase loans a principle similar to the federal housing administration plan.

Aides of Lee said 52 senators, a majority, had signed the measure as co-authors, and that Chairman Jones (D-Tex) of the house agriculture committee would press for a similar bill in the house.

The bill would be administered by the Farm Security Administration, which directs the government's existing program of financial assistance for farm tenants desiring to become land owners.

Gargotta Goes To State Prison

KANSAS CITY, June 19—(AP)—Charles Gargotta, who last week pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with intent to kill Sheriff Thomas B. Bash in August, 1933, surrendered today and an hour later was en route to Jefferson City to start serving a three-year term.

The first indictment against Gargotta dragged through 27 terms of court before it was dismissed last winter at the request of W. W. Graves, Jr., county prosecutor. The dismissal brought a blast from Gov. Lloyd C. Stark and Gargotta was re-indicted.

The same grand jury also indicted graves for neglect of official duty. His trial is set for August.

Several Hurt As Cars Collide Near Windsor

Accident At A Junction Sunday Afternoon

Several persons were injured Sunday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock at the junction of Highway 52 and Farm-to-Market road 127, five miles east of Windsor, when a model T Ford coupe driven by Forrest Miller, of eight miles south of Green Ridge, and a 1939 Oldemobile sedan driven by Earl Colvin, of Lexington, Mo., collided headon.

According to information on the accident, Mr. Miller was driving east following another automobile, and Mr. Colvin was headed west on Highway 52. The car ahead of Mr. Miller stopped to made a turn and Mr. Miller, it was said turned out to go around him, just as the Colvin car appeared.

Sneak Thief Steals From Church Here

Man Takes $12 From Pocketbook Of Miss Bessie Perkins

A sneak thief with little respect for churches Monday afternoon entered an office at the First Baptist church here and stole $12 from a pocketbook belonging to Miss Bessie Perkins, 622 East Tenth street.

Miss Perkins was doing some work in the basement for the vacation Bible school at the time. Miss Ellen Merill, Miss Perkins and A. P. Sands, custodian in the church, were the only ones in the building.

Didn't Investigate Sounds

Miss Perkins said later that she had heard someone enter the office upstairs and had remarked, to her companions, that her pocketbook was up there. But she didn't go upstairs at the time.

Mrs. A. C. Ford, who lives on Lamine avenue across from the church, said she saw a man enter the building go into the office and then come out walking hurriedly.

"The man was walking down the street in front of our house, she said," and he stopped and looked over at the church and then walked across the street and entered the building.

"When I looked across the street again I saw him lay something on the desk and leave in a hurry, walking toward Ohio avenue. I became suspicious and went over to the church to inquire about him," she added.

The police were notified but were unable to find any trace of the theif. He was described by Mrs. Ford as a small, well-dressed man who was carrying a suitcase.

News of the marriage was received by Sedalia relatives Sunday morning from the bride, who has been visiting in Texas.

The couple left after the ceremony for New York to attend the fair and will go from there to the San Francisco fair before returning to El Paso where they will reside.

Mrs. Finnell, now Mrs. Horton, has taught in the Sedalia public schools for about twenty years, recently teaching social studies in Smith-Cotton high school.

Two Dramatic Scenes Before Federal Court

Alien Gets Two Years Term For Illegal Voting

KANSAS CITY, June 20—(AP)—Federal court has served as a stage for two more dramatic scenes in the government's fight against Kansas City's underworld and its machine politics.

The first punctuated sharply the arguments of attorneys late yesterday for a bill of particulars in a perjury indictment against Charles V. Carollo, termed by Judge Albert L. Reeves "the big man of Kansas City gambling."

"This defendant," said Thomas A. Costolow, assistant U. S. district attorney, "has threatened the life of a witness and the lives of the family of another witness.

"He is thoroughly informed concerning the charge against him. The ignorance of his attorney is no excuse. Carollo himself already has taken action against the witnesses.

Carollo is not surprised by what our evidence is, but I will grant his attorneys may continue to remain in a state of surprise. Your honor, if we disclose the names of the witnesses, it will end this case. It also will end the witnesses themselves."

William L. Vandeventer, a district attorney under the Hoover administration, was appearing for Carollo. He termed the government's arguments fallacious. Regardless of its suspicions, Vandeventer argued, the government could not deprive a defendant of his constitutional rights.

Ruling Is Reserved

Judge Reeves reserved his ruling on the plea for the bill of particulars, saying he would decide on the issue when the defense filed a demurrer.

The bill was asked on an indictment charging Carollo — known also as "Charley the Wop" — with perjury in connection with his unsuccessful application for citizenship. Carollo, already convicted on a state gambling charge, faces another federal perjury indictment and one charging he used the mails to defraud.

He admitted — although that was not a part of the charge —that he voted twice at every election.

Addressing the maximum penalty of two years, Judge Reeves remarked:

"Any citizen who voted twice in the state of Missouri, if the laws were upheld, could receive a much stiffer penalty than the federal law metes out for that offense. You have asked for probation but I could not grant that. If I did, the other aliens who are usurping citizenship privileges to vote would say the government simply slaps you on the wrist and set you free to commit the outrage again."

Groaned Locascio as he left the court:

Donnici Given Thirteen Years

KANSAS CITY, June 19.—(AP)—Angelo Donnici, convicted head of a $12,000,000 a year narcotic ring smashed by federal officers, must serve 13 years in the federal penitentiary. He pleaded guilty today to three narcotics indictments and was sentenced to five years in prison by Judge Merrill E. Otis.

The new sentence will run consecutively with an eight-year term assessed at the time of his recent conviction by a jury. Judge Otis also fined Donnici $9,000 today bringing to $16,000 the amount he owes the federal government.

Charles Crapisi, Donnici's lieutenant, was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $3,000 by Judge Otis. Crapisi pleaded guilty to six charges in two indictments previous to Donnici's first trial but sentencing was delayed.

Three indictments still are pending against Crapisi.

Brief Ride On 'Gravy Train'

House Sanctions 25 To Serve On Revision Group

JEFFERSON CITY, June 20—(AP)—The "gravy train" whistled loudly through Missouri's house of representatives yesterday.

The ride was brief, however. They stayed on only an hour.

During that time house leaders talked the group out of their idea that every one of the assembly's 184 legislators should serve on the state revision commission which will codify the laws of the last decade — at $15 a day.

They finally reconsidered and compromised on merely increasing the membership of the commission from 18 to 25.

Rep. Fred O. McGuire (D) of Trenton, offered the amendment which would have let all the legislators serve.

"If the gravy train is going by, I want to have my ladle out," he declared.

The house agreed with a roar of "ayes." But when reconsideration forced a roll call vote on McGuire's amendment it went down, 50 to 35.

The 25-member commission finally agreed upon would include 13 from the house and 12 from the senate, with two of the senators and four of the representatives chosen from the minority party. Members would be appointed by the president pro tem of the senate and the speaker of the house.

The bill now must return to the senate, which already has set aside $125,000 in an appropriation measure to finance the commission that is created every 10 years to prepare for the decennial re-printing of Missouri statutes.

A proposal creating a modified legislative council to aid in preparation of bills was turned down emphatically by the house. The plan was inserted by a senate committee in a house-passed measure setting up a committee to take care of the legislative quarters in the capitol. But the lower branch refused the amendment and sent the measure into conference.

Similar proposals have been rejected with regularity for several sessions.

One of the measures the house sent to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark provides that county surveyors in counties of 20,000 to 50,000 population also shall serve as highway engineers at salaries of $1,200 to $2,000.

Kiwanians Of Clinton Guests

A joint meeting of the Sedalia and Clinton Kiwanis clubs was held Monday night at the Bothwell hotel, to observe "All Kiwanis Night."

He said that as he read the message, 104,000 Kiwanians in 2,000 communities in the United States and Canada, meeting in observance of the 16th anniversary of "All Kiwanis Night," were hearing the same words from the international president.

Mr. Keyser also lead the rededication of members. Lee Montgomery, president of the Sedalia club, welcomed members and their guests from Clinton. C. E. Hassett of Clinton, made the response.

Included on the program was a violin solo by Abe Rosenthal of Sedalia, accompanied by Miss Martha Redmond; a history of Kiwanis by W. R. Courtney of Sedalia; and club songs led by W. M. Johns and accompanied by Mrs. Nellie Monegan, club pianist.

There were about 30 guests from Clinton.

Senate Votes To Keep Office At The Capital

Strong Effort For Compensation Quarters Here

JEFFERSON CITY, June 20—(AP)—Inter-city competition for the state unemployment compensation headquarters reached the senate floor today but an hour of lively bidding resulted in an agreement to leave the commission in the state capital.

The senate approved a proviso however, that Jefferson City must furnish "modern fireproof" quarters "satisfactory" to the commission, now housed in a shoe factory building here.

The provision was adopted 19 to 12 and the bill passed. Similar house concurrence is expected.

Sens. Charles Ewen (D), Sedalia, W. B. Whitlow (D), Fulton, Francis Smith (D), St. Joseph, opposed any legislation restrictions on the commission's location. Sedalia and Columbia are among the cities seeking the commission headquarters. Columbia is in Whitlow's district.

"The state could save money by moving the commission to Sedalia," Ewen argued. "We'll put up a good building for $150,000 and give the state 18 years to amortize the payments and take over its ownership."

"I don't think as a matter of legislative policy these headquarters should be frozen into any community," protested Whitlow.

Sens. George A. Rozier (R), Perryville and Phil M. Donnelly (D), Lebanon, defended the proviso.

Donnelly said the Jefferson City Chamber of Commerce "has been working with the commission in making plans for a new building which after a few years would revert to the state. In the long run the state would gain if the commission stayed here where it belongs."

Jefferson City is in Donnelly's senatorial district.

News Disappointing

A number of Sedalians have worked tirelessly the past few past few weeks, endeavoring to have the state employment compensation headquarters located in Sedalia. It was disappointing news received here during the noon hour that the senate had approved action to leave the commission in Jefferson City.

Ellsworth Green, secretary of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, has spent several days in Jefferson City, watching Sedalia's interests in the matter. Every effort had been made to contact senators asking them to oppose the bill which made it compulsory that the headquarters remain in Jefferson City.

Among those who have made numerous trips to Jefferson City, and have put forth every effort to have the headquarters located in Sedalia are, Mayor Julian H. Bagby, Joseph L. Rosenthal, president of the Chamber of Commerce, J. T. Montgomery, Henry C. Salveter, Lee Montgomery, Fred Wesner, city counselor, George H. Scruton, Eugene Sullivan, Henry R. Harris, Don S. Lamm, Dan Carr, Emmett Sullivan and Claude Campbell.

The Sedalia delegation offered every inducement possible to secure the offices for Sedalia. Any proposition submitted by Jefferson City, and other towns was not only matched by Sedalians but the commission was promised even greater inducements. For a time things looked very favorable for Sedalia, but the move of the senate, passing a bill to make Jefferson City permanent headquarters, has blocked their efforts, temporarily at least.

The band which the little crippled boy with hunched shoulders drummed into the "hottest" band in the country, arranged to play a medley of Webb's songs—in solemn tempo—at church services this afternoon.

Ella Fitzgerald, with whom Webb wrote "A-Tisket, A-Tasket," decided to sing "My Buddy," after discarding "Have Mercy," another song co-authored by Webb.

Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Gene Krupa and Jimmy Lunceford dropped batons between shows to join the processional to the grave as honorary pallbearers.

Roosts In Open During Summer

When turkeys no longer need heat and the protection of a house they should be moved to clean range and provided with roosts in the open, says E. M. Funk, of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

An acre of good clover or alfalfa will provide room for 100 birds from 10 weeks old until they are ready to be marketed. If the acre can be divided into two plots, so that the turkeys can be kept on each lot for two weeks at one time, better results can be obtained.

Roosts should be four inches wide, and placed five to six feet above the ground. Wire should be placed under the roosts and around the sides, so the turkeys cannot get to the droppings. Turkey growers use lanterns and flares at night to good advantage in keeping predatory animals from the flocks.

Shade is essential during the summer months. Shade provided by growing crops or trees is most desirable, but if these are not available, artificial shade should be provided. During hot weather turkeys grow slowly, and good shade where they may rest and get fresh water and feed will stimulate growth.

Well balanced rations in hoppers should be kept before the turkeys at all times. Both mash and grain should be kept so that the birds can consume what they want. A good growing mash is one made up of 100 pounds of yellow corn meal, 70 of bran or ground oats, 100 of shorts or ground wheat, 30 of alfalfa leaf meal, 60 of meat scrap, 20 of dried milk, and four pounds of salt.

Recent experiments show that grasshoppers are good feed for turkeys. They are very largely protein, however, and the turkeys should have their regular rations before them, even though they may be on range where there are considerable number of grasshoppers.

Granite or other hard grit should be kept before the turkeys.

Stockmann, of Malta Bend, Mo., Clyne Shoemaker of Wichita, Kas., and four grandchildren. Two children are deceased. He is also survived by the following brothers, Sterling Shoemaker of Postal, Mo., James Shoemaker of Sedalia, and Samuel Shoemaker of Pilot Grove, Mo. There are also a number of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Shoemaker lived on a farm east of Sedalia for 25 years before moving to Sedalia about 16 years ago. He had been engaged in carpenter work the greater portion of his life.

A. R. Easton Dies

Alton R. 'Rufe' Easton, 85, former Sedalian, died suddenly at Blue Springs, Mo., where for some time he had been residing. News of his death was received in a telephone message to Dr. John Carlisle from Mr. Easton's son, Theodore, of Kansas City.

The son stated that the body would be brought to Sedalia for burial in Crown Hill cemetery at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Mr. Easton was for many years employed with the Crawford Loan and Abstract Company. He served as secretary of the Sedalia Lodge of Elks for more than twenty-five years.

Born in St. Louis Mr. Easton was a member of a pioneer family there. The well-known Easton avenue was named for his father.

Mrs. Margaret E. B. Crawford

Mrs. Margaret Emerine Bourn Crawford, widow of the late James Harvey Crawford, died Monday, June 12, at her home in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

Mrs. Crawford, nee Margaret Emerine Bourn, was born near Sedalia January 18, 1849. She was united in marriage to James Harvey Crawford, a soldier of the Civil War, May 25, 1865. After his discharge from the army, April 14, 1865, he was made a brevet colonel, and a month later married his boyhood sweetheart, Margaret Bourn.

For seven or eight years they lived on a farm south of Sedalia, now known as the Wingate farm. May 1, 1873, with their three children, they left their Missouri home for the west. They had two teams loaded with household goods and camp equipment, and there were five other teams to keep them company. They reached Denver June 5, thirty-five days after leaving their Missouri home. Theirs was the first wagon over the Rollins pass, and the road was not entirely completed. They reached Hot Sulphur Springs, ranged their cattle and built a log house, which is still standing. Mr. Crawford decided to go further west, and went to Steamboat Springs, where they located. He put up precaution notices and roughly marked out the foundations for a house. In July of the next year they founded Steamboat Springs, and Mr. and Mrs. Crawford lived to celebrate their 65 wedding anniversary together there. Mr. Crawford died June 24, 1930.

Mrs. Crawford is survived by her four children, Mrs. Lulie Pritchett, Denver; Logan Crawford, John Crawford, and Mrs. Mary King, of Steamboat Springs. She was a sister-in-law of the late Grant Crawford of Sedalia.

Funeral services were held in Steamboat Springs last Thursday morning.

Child Fatally Crushed By Car

Tragic End At Parsons To Melvin J. Von Holten

Melvin Jacob Von Holten, aged 2, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Von Holten, of Parsons, until eighteen months ago residents of Pettis county, met a tragic death at Parsons, Kas., according to word received here. The family were members of the Pleasant Hill Methodist church where the baby was baptized by the Rev. Wm. Simpson.

An account of the death appeared in the Parsons Sun as follows:

"The life of a 2-year-old infant was taken and those of two sets of young parents were cruelly blighted in a tragedy near the Lakin tourist camp.

"The accident cost the life of Melvin Jacob Von Holten, 2, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Von Holten, 3323 Main. The infant wheeled his tiny kiddie car beneath the wheels of an automobile driven by Mrs. Lester Neilsen, 22, and was instantly crushed to death.

"Although prostrated with grief and shock, Mrs. Neilsen, mother of a 3-year-old daughter and expecting the arrival of another child within a few weeks was able to give a partially coherent account of the tragedy.

Saw Child. Drove Carefully

She was returning home from a "stork shower" and noticed the child as she turned off Main street toward the cabin in which she and her husband, an employe of the Roper petroleum company, make their home, she said. She was driving at a slow rate of speed and swung her car to make a wider detour around the baby, but the child apparently wheeled his toy beneath one of the front wheels of the machine. She was unaware that the car had struck the infant until she heard the kiddie-car grating beneath the wheels.

"She stopped the car within the space of a very few feet, and discovered the baby's body lying about 10 or 15 feet from the rear of the automobile. Witnesses called Dr. J. D. Pace, county coroner and Deputy Sheriff Fred Crispell, but any attempt to resuscitate the child was useless.

"Mr. and Mrs. Von Holten moved to Parsons about 18 months ago from Mora, Mo. Mr. Von Holten is employed at the Gardner billiard parlor at 1913 Main. formerly operated by Mrs. Von Holten's father, Guy Lakin.

Funeral Tomorrow

"The baby was born March 10, 1937, in Pettis county, Mo. Surviving him are his parents, and grandparents, Henry Von Holten, Mora, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lakin, 1318 Crawford.

"He was enrolled in the cradle roll of the Washington avenue Methodist church here, where services will be held at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon, conducted by the Rev. F. E. Ryerson. The body will be taken to Shiloh, Mo., where graveside services will be held and interment made."

Two Injured Katy Wreck

MOKANE, Mo., June 21—(AP)—The caboose and an oil tank, the last two cars of a Missouri-Kansas-Texas freight train, left the tracks and overturned three miles west of here today, injuring J. R. Smith, Katy roadmaster, and Carl Toler of Columbia, a brakeman.

Joe Culver of New Franklin, the engineer, said a rail probably gave way after most of the train had passed over it safely. A long stretch of track was torn up in the wreck.

The injured men were taken to a hospital in Jefferson City.

Address To PTA By Rev. O. J. Rumpf

The Oak Point Parent Teacher Association met Friday at the school with Mrs. Norman Gibson, presiding. Mrs. Pauline Carroll, program chairman, presented Mary Beth and Harold Kueck, of Sedalia, who played a piano and trombone duet, "Moonglade" and "Shepherd's Dream."

Rev. O. J. Rumpf, pastor of the Immanuel Evngelical church, gave an interesting talk on "What Is The Best Thing For a Community." Some of the high points mentioned were: (1) United interest that causes people to work together. (2) Do not lose courage because you deal with numbers or the work progresses slowly. (3) Success comes by gathering individuals instead of bringing in the masses.

Cumberlands Abolish Book Censorship

Abandon Permanent Board; Marshall Convention Closes

MARSHALL, Mo., June 21—(AP)—The Cumberland Presbyterian assembly voted after two hours of vigorous debate Tuesday to abolish its permanent committee on denominational books, a body exercising censorship on matter published by the church.

The motion to abolish the committee was offered by one of its members, the Rev. E. K. Reagin, president of Bethel College, McKenzie, Tenn., after the assembly had voted to continue it another year with $100 for expenses.

Supporting Rev. Reagin was the Rev. J. W. Elder of Ft. Knox, Ky., who contended the committee only duplicated censorship imposed by various church boards.

Was Surprise Motion

Rev. Reagin's surprise motion set forth that responsibility for published works should rest on the boards that recommended them—the education board, Christian Education board, etc.

Opposition to doing away with the committee was led by the Rev. C. E. Hurley, Memphis, Tenn.; the Rev. J. A. Davis, Memphis; and the Rev. H. T. Curtis, Austin, Tex.

Rev. Davis said: "As a father, I would have failed had I not guarded my children against dangerous literature. The church must be that vigilant."

Rev. Galloway contended the committee should remain as a safeguard.

The assembly voted to reconsider its motion continuing the committee by a 45-43 standing vote. The final vote, abolishing the body, passed by a large standing vote.

Convention Ends

Action on the book committee brought the convention to a close.

A memorial by the Illinois synod protesting the use of textbooks by certain "modernistic" authors also was debated at length, but no action was taken.

The assembly refused to adopt a mileage plan for delegates, leaving each presbytery to pay the expenses of its own representatives, despite the protest of one delegate that the plan will be presented every year "until something is finally done about it to help the churches and delegates who are not centrally located."

Pay Hike To Be Voted On In 1940

JEFFERSON CITY, June 21—(AP)—The general assembly voted today to ask the people to approve in November, 1940, a legislative pay hike under which the lawmakers would receive a flat $125 a month whether in session or not.

The house passed 92 to 6 the constitutional amendment, sponsored by Senator M. E. Casey (D) Kansas City, thus assuring it a place on the ballot at the next general election. The proposition does not require the governor's signature.

The lawmakers now are paid $5 a day for the first 120 days of a revision session such as the present one and $1 a day thereafter.

For ordinary meetings they receive $5 for the first 70 days and $1 thereafter.

Casey's proposal would eliminate the $30 postage allowance for each member during a session and also strike out constitutional section which provides that if either branch is out of session more than three days, the assembly is automatically adjourned sine die.

The lower branch adopted the amendment without debate. These six members voted against it: Gill, (D) Kansas City; H. S. Rainwater (R) Polk county; T. J. Walker (D) Columbia; H. T. Floyd (R) Andrew county; Urlin Salmon (R) Daviess county and M. J. Woodward (D) Clinton county.

Legislative payhikers uniformly have met defeat at the polls in the past.

The house adopted 98 to 2 minor senate corrections in a bill of Rep. E. W. Couey (D) Sedalia, requiring employers to furnish monthly statements of deductions in pay. The measure now goes to the governor.

Rainfall Here of Nearly an Inch

Showers which fell early Monday left a rainfall of .84 of an inch and caused a delay in the belated wheat cutting. However the rain will prove beneficial to other crops.

It is not believed the rain will injure the wheat or oats which have not been cut.

No Inquest On Mrs. J. L. Jones

BLACKWATER, June 21—Mrs. James L. Jones, 30, who drank a quantity of sodium fluoride solution Tuesday morning about 3:30 died suddenly here at 7:45 after she had been given medical treatment.

Coroner J. C. Tincher, who came here immediately after her death said there would be no inquest.

Her husband, James Jones, local farmer and employe of the Missouri State Highway department, believed his wife drank the poison solution accidentally. He said Mrs. Jones had been in good health and was apparently in good spirits when she retired Monday night.

A pound can of the powder, purchased recently, had been partially used in ridding young chickens of mites and several days ago a solution had been made from the powder to be used on potato plants and for treating flowers and other plants on the farm which is located about two miles east of Nelson.

Mrs. Jones slept, as was the custom, in an upstairs bedroom with one of their sons, Jones told Coroner Tincher. Jones and the second son slept in a downstairs bedroom.

Jones said he was awakened on Tuesday morning about 3:30 by Mrs. Jones who told him she had taken a portion of the solution. He immediately gave her Epsom salts to induce vomiting and rushed to the office of Dr. W. L. Abney here about 4 o'clock.

She was apparently responding to medical treatment, the coroner said, when she died suddenly at 7:45.

Jones is employed by the Missouri State Highway department during the spring and summer months he is commissioned to keep the shoulders clear of weeds with a horse-drawn mower.

Federal Aid Is Commended by Gov. L. C. Stark

Appreciates Help of President To Break Machine

NEW YORK, June 19.—Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri said today he could not have broken the political machine of Democratic Boss Tom Pendergast "without the help of President Roosevelt." Pendergast now is in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas. He was convicted of income tax evasion.

"When I asked the President for help I got it right away," Governor Stark said. "There was never any hesitation on the part of the federal government, and without its aid we could never have done the job."

The governor who came here to address the Advertising Federation of America at a banquet tonight, was reticent about national politics and his own political future in particular.

A report that he might be appointed to a cabinet post brought this response:

"I've already made two announcements that I couldn't accept anything that would take me away from Missouri. I've got a big job to do there. It must be cleaned up. There's lots of mopping up yet on the Pendergast business. Under the new law I must appoint a new board of police commissioners and see that the police stay out of poltics in Kansas City."

Not Talk Politics

The governor will go to Washington tomorrow. He said he expects to see the President but not about politics.

Governor Stark said the outlook for crops in Missouri this year was "magnificent," and remarked that "on the whole things in general are better in Missouri than elsewhere."

He said he attributed this to the diversified nature of the state —mining, agriculture and industry. The relief situation also has improved, especially in rural areas.

"Did you find that business in Kansas City was seriously affected by the Pendergast machine?" he was asked.

"It definitely was. Business men in Kansas City couldn't call their souls their own. If a man didn't go along he just had to move out. That's all."

Did his attack on the Pendergast machine have a wholesome effect on public psychology?

Definitely, the governor thought.

"And Missouri voters are only a cross-section of the United States," he continued. "The American people are more conscious today of freedom and citizenship than they have been for a generation.

"The pendulum is swinging the other way—back to a sound interest in good government. People are more alert and the mass of of people act right when they know what is happening. In the past business men and working men and farmers were too much inclinded to let others take care care of politics. Now they want to see that things are done properly."

In support of this statement, the governor pointed to the passage of a bill in the Missouri legislature for the appointment of a board of police commissioners by the governor.

"When that was introduced it had about one chance in 20 of passing. But the people were aroused and hammered at their representatives in the cities and in the cross-roads sections of the state and made them pass it," he said.

Call For Wagner Act Revision

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers called for revision of the Wagner Act today to remove much of the labor board's administrative discretion.

John C. Gall, the association's counsel, told a senate labor subcommittee considering amendments that the board had "perverted" the law and said the matter "should be specifically dealt with by congress, particularly as the board has clearly shown by its testimony that it has no intention of modifying anything except minor procedural requirements."

The association, which Gall said represented 7,500 manufacturers employing several million workers, recommended amendments to:

Give employers the right to petition for elections to determine collective bargaining representatives.

Reports Theft While In Car

Laurance Lueck reported to police headquarters about 11:30 o'clock last night that he had been held up and robbed of between $35 and $40. The robbery occurred, he said, while he was in his car on a road west of the state fair grounds.

Numerous reports of robberies of a similar kind have been reported to the police officers the past three weeks, particularly on Saturday nights.

Lueck's description of the hold-up man is the same as that of the others who have made reports. It has always been one person, an apparently young man, who does not show a gun, but holds his hand in his pocket as though he has one.

All the robberies have been in the western part of the city, or on roads adjacent to the city limits on the west.

Improvements of $80,000 at Missouri Fair

Increase Made In Premiums For 1939 Exposition

Estimating that $80,000 in renovations on Missouri's fairgrounds here had been completed since the summer of last year, Charles W. Green, secretary, yesterday announced a proposed increase of more than 10 per cent for awards and premiums for 1939 and, with his staff, settled down for three intensive months of preparation for the 39th annual Missouri State Fair, Aug. 19-26.

Among improvements on the million-and-a-half dollar plant at Sedalia, Green listed the newly-completed Floriculture Building and a new four-lane entranceway to the 236-acre grounds. Much of this work of renovation and expansion has been done under a $95,000 Works Progress Administration program underway since April 1938.

Definite announcement of the increase in premium money, Mr. Green said, will be officially made with the appearance of the State Fair Premium Book, shortly to be off the press.

Auto races, previously a major attraction on the opening Sunday and closing Saturday, will be held this year on consecutive days, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 19 and 20. Children's Day, formerly held on the opening Saturday, with all children under 12 admitted free, has been moved to Monday. Five afternoons of harness-horse racing with $7,100 and added money are scheduled, with the Western Breeders' Futurity being raced for the first time as a regular part of the Sedalia exposition's annual program and under an arrangement which will make it a permanent feature of the Missouri State Fair. The State Fair Horse Show will occupy the Coliseum for six nights and will feature the Fifth National Saddle Horse Futurity.

Sunday, Aug. 20 has been designated as American Legion Day. Governor's Day has been set for Wednesday, Aug. 23.

With good weather, last year's attendance, which topped a quarter of a million, is expected to be decidedly exceeded this August, Green, now serving his seventh year as secretary-manager of the fair, declared.

Mother Admits Killing

Prosecutor Says She Suffocated 10-Month-Old Child 'To Get Rid Of Him'

By Arthur S. Bostwick

FREMONT, O., June 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Velma Baker Fink sobbed hysterically today at the graveside of her slain 10-week-old son —and a few hours later confessed, Prosecutor A. L. Hyzer announced, that she suffocated the child and tossed his body into a creek to "get rid" of him.

Subjected to several hours' questioning under a lie detector, the attractive 22-year-old mother broke down late tonight, the prosecutor said.

"I can't believe it," cried Mrs. Oren Baker, Mrs. Fink's gray-haired mother, who was present when the young woman made her oral statement.

Factory Worker's Tip

Prosecutor Hyzer said the break in the case came after he questioned Richard White, a factory worker who said he was out with Mrs. Fink between midnight and 2 a. m. last Tuesday.

Mrs. Fink, who previously had denied she was out with anyone at that time, was confronted with White's statement. She then said, Hyzer reported, that she and her mother quarreled about caring for the baby after she returned from the date. It was then she decided to get rid of it, Hyzer related.

Tuesday night the young woman—divorced only a week previously from Ervin Fink, 23, an apprentice machinist—took the infant from its carriage at the Baker home in Clyde, placed it in a brother's auto and drove to a bridge five miles away.

There, Hyzer quoted her as saying, she lifted the baby from the car and threw it into Muddy Green creek.

Child Smothered First

The body was found by Deputy Sheriffs about 12 hours later. Subsequent examination showed the child had been smothered before it was thrown into the water.

Baker, in reporting the child missing, said baby Haldon, known to the family affectionately as "Buster," apparently was taken

Nine Killed By A Tornado and Over 60 Hurt

Sections of Seven Towns Damaged In Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS, June 19.— A tornado that howled across 25 miles of the countyside near here Sunday afternoon killed nine persons, injured upwards of 60, and wrecked an estimated $500,000 worth of property.

The death list, at first placed at 10, was reduced today when Walter Israel, 28, of Anoka, Minn., returned to his home. He said he had been unable to reach the town through the storm, and officials had listed him among the dead when he could not be found.

The national guard, meanwhile set up a refugee encampment to provide food and shelter for those whose homes were wiped out by the storm, and guardsmen and volunteers poked about in the wreckage, seeking possible undiscovered victims.

Sections of seven towns—Corcoran, Maple Grove, Champlin, Anoka, Cedar, St. Francis and Bethel—lying from 15 to 30 miles west and northwest of here were damaged with Anoka, a town of some 5,000, suffering most seriously. There 40 to 50 buildings were demolished and five persons killed.

The dead included a family of four whose automobile ran headlong into the wind near Corcoran.

The dead:

Mrs. Anna Freeman, 76, Minneapolis.
Ellen Freeman, 43, Minneapolis.
James Bradley, 37, Minneapolis.
Mrs. James Bradley, 34, Minneapolis.
H. G. Groat, 73, Anoka.
Leo Kidd, 25, Anoka.
Ernest Syring, about 50, Anoka.
Edward Morrissette, Anoka.
Fred Zimmerman, 75, Chamberlin.

The automobile in which Mrs. Freeman, her daughter, Ellen, and the Bradleys, her son-in-law and daughter, were riding was whirled several hundred feet and demolished. Bodies of the occupants were scattered in a field. All the others were killed in the collapse of homes except Zimmerman. He was working in his garden when the tornado lifted him up, carried him several hundred feet and dashed him to death against a bridge.

James Wright Holdup Suspect

Admission To One 'Stickup' Made To The Officers

James "Chow" Wright, was arrested early Sunday morning by the police in connection with the holdup of Lawrence Lueck near the Missouri State Fair grounds Saturday night. Lueck was held up and robbed of between $35 and $40 by a bandit who appeared alongside his car with a handkerchief covering his face.

Wright had been under suspicion by the police for more than a week, after he had been approached on the fair grounds and questioned for a few minutes. At that time he was released by John Whiteman, night watchman on the grounds.

Following the Saturday night holdup, a description furnished to police tallied with that of Wright and it was decided to await until early morning before arresting him giving him a chance to return to his home.

Officers Finnell and Nelson went to the home and got him out of his bed and took him to police headquarters where he was questioned. He admitted according to the officers to one "stick-up" but denied he had anything to do with the others. He also claimed he was hit in the head a short time after he held up Lueck and most of the money he declared was taken from him.

Charges of grand larceny are to be filed against him this afternoon by Prosecuting Attorney Frank W. Hayes, to whom Wright confessed early Sunday, as well as making his statement before Chief of Police John J. O'Brien and Officer Lawrence N. Englund.

In the past two weeks several motorists have been held up while parked on the State Fair boulevard and on the old highway 65 road which passes the Missouri-Kansas-Texasstockyards.

Wright in his statement to the officers said he did not have a gun but put a rock in his coat to make it appear he had a gun.

He is held in the county jail pending the hearing.

Youths Make A Danger Trip Across Divide

Without Guides Traveled by Dog Team and Canoe

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 19.—Two young men who traveled by canoe and dog team from New York to Fairbanks couldn't hire Indian guides at $25 a day to make a hazardous 600-mile crossing of the Continental Divide. So they made it themselves.

Richard Slobodin, 24, Columbia University graduate, tells the story of their daring venture from Fort McPherson in the Canadian Arctic to Fort Yukon, Alaska.

"Native guides refused our offer of $25 a day to accompany us, saying they would not go with us that season at any price because of the ice jams and flood waters in 60 miles of rapids in the Rat river.

"When we reached the summit, the only remaining food was 17 cups of flour and some sugar and we were 200 miles from the nearest settlement. There was game of all kinds, however, so we weren't worried about our grub.

"We had compensation for the hard work once we got clear of the ice jams downstream when we shot down a narrow flume river under the notes of two wolves drinking."

Slobodin, an anthropologist, and Robert Fuller, 27, New York sculptor, completed the 13-month voyage Friday.

Slobodin said they did a little hitch-hiking on their 6,000-mile trip, explaining:

"Since our chief purpose was to do field research work among the Indians of the Northland, we saw no point in refusing tows and hitches. We paddled thousands of miles but our progress last summer also included rides on yachts, steamships, barges and scows."

Once, their canoe was towed by a trader's scow from Fort Smith to Great Salve Lake. The canoeists served as members of the crew.

"Fuller and another man, equally ignorant of the Salve river, piloted the vessel containing 50 tons of cargo," he said, "and they struck only two sand bars."

At Fort McPherson, tiny settlement near Mackenzie Delta, the canoeists rented a cabin and settled down for a study of the Peel river Kutchin Indians last November.

"If anything of value resulted from the winter's study," Slobodin said, "credit is due chiefly to the Peel river Indians who were friendly and helpful. Our Landlord, Fred Firth, a trader, who was one-quarter Indian, happened to be an authority on native history and was of real aid."

The pair visited various Indian camps in the district by dog teams and snow shoes.

Gannett Suggests President Resign

WASHINGTON, June 19—(AP)—Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., newspaper publisher, suggested Sunday that President Roosevelt resign at once, so "we can begin to rebuild a dynamic surging America."

"Instead of paying attention to Mr. Icke's senseless third term propaganda," Gannett said in a statement, "the country should be considering how it can induce President Roosevelt to cut short his second term. The sooner he resigns the better."

Catholic Trade Unionists Push Labor Expansion

Training Program To Saturate Labor With Christian Ideals

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, June 17.—An organized effort to make effective in organized labor circles the labor and social principles of the Papal Encyclicals and of the Catholic church will result from the deliberations of the Catholic Social Action Congress, just closed here.

The Association of Catholic Trade Unionists (ACTU), formed quietly in 1937, and now grown to 2,000 members in 20 cities, is planning expansion to every community in which there are large organized labor groups.

Carrying out the dictum of Pope Pius XI that labor organizations must be paralleled by Catholic organizations for religious and moral training of trade union members to make Christion principles count in the labor movement, the ACTU will gather prospective leaders in labor groups and schools, and train them in the philosophy and practise of labor principles of the Encyclicals.

Defense Training

The Rev. Sebastian Erbacher of Duns Scotus College in Detroit, chaplain of ACTU's chapter there, puts it this way:

"Our task is to gather prospective leaders in labor, ground them in sound principles, train them to facility in defending these principles, and in applying them to their workaday lives. They may thus go back to their unions prepared to make their Christian and American convictions count in formulating the policy and controlling the action of their unions."

The president of the ACTU is Ed Squiteri, youthful member of the Utilities Workers' Union in New York. The organization was formed in February of 1937 when Squitieri and a group of 10 friends in various labor organizations were discussing various experiences in their organizations. They reviewed cases of discharge for union activity, of injustice, of union policies rammed through by small but skillful and vociferous Communist minorities.

Form First Chapter

And they decided that these things were matters of organization and training.

They formed the first chapter of the ACTU, and after consultation with several priests, secured the Rev. John P. Monaghan as their chaplain. George R. Donahue of the International Longshoreman's Association became executive secretary, Victor Lo Pinto of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, is vice-president.

Soon after the first Catholic school for trade unionists, offering training in labor philosophy and tactics had been established at Fordham University, Ed Scully, a young lawyer on the staff of District Attorney Tom Dewey, founded the Catholic Labor Defense League to handle legal problems of labor's rights that might endanger ACTU principles. And the ACTU began to expand.

It now has chapters in Boston, Detroit, Akron, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Newark, Chicago, San Francisco, Cleveland, Washington and ten other cities.

No Control By Cliques

All leaders deny any purpose to form by means of the ACTU

The Rev. John Monaghan

"cliques" within already-established unions, or any effort to control them politically.

"We will, however," insists Squitieri, "fight in a positive manner for Christian principles within the unions and against any racketeer tendencies which oppose the interests of the rank and file. We oppose violent tactics, and all 'Marxian line' activities. We favor conciliation when that is possible, but once we determine that a strike is just, we support it."

This newest Catholic labor move supplements the work of the Catholic Radical Alliance, which gained prominence in Pittsburgh by active support of the steel organizing drive, when in several instances priests appeared on the picket lines. It is possible that the two organizations may be consolidated later.

Talk of Special Assembly Meet

JEFFERSON CITY, June 19.—Missouri's longest legislative session moved into the final windup stage this week but only a few of the tiring lawmakers were hopeful of getting away within 10 days.

The house was on hand after its second recess because of lack of work and still had practically nothing before it due to the deliberate senate's failure to accomplish anything since passage of the Kansas City police bill last week.

The upper chamber remained stymied over bus and truck revenues and supporters of a bill Gov. Lloyd C. Stark urged to bring in needed funds for the state highway department expected to spend at least two more days on it.

So the house members probably won't have cause for serious deliberations before mid-week.

Talk of special session later in the year has increased considerably within the past few days because of the urge to adjourn.

Many observers doubt if all important matters still pending will be acted upon.

Governor Stark has hinted he would call an extra session unless the assembly found some way to provide more money for direct relief. He also recently recommended passage of a bill to place the blind pension program under the social security commission so the state could obtain federal aid.

No action designed to solve these two problems has been taken thus far. If they are disregarded it might be possible for the solons to make their general exodus by week's end, but a special session undoubtedly would be the result, observers say.
